French Aces Span Atlantic To New York, Short of Goal

Wings' Vibration Causes Them to Abandon Continental Hop.

Being Dead Hero No Lure to Rossi

Distance Mark Stands; Pair Is First to Fly Sea Both Ways.

New York, May 28 (AP).—The French aces, Capt. Maurice Rossi and Lieut. Paul Codos, conquered the Atlantic by air again today with new honors and, paradoxically, shattered hopes.

Heavy vibration of the wings caused them to land their silver monoplane, the Joseph Lebrix, at Floyd Bennett Field at 1:38 p. m. (Eastern standard time)—clear across the continent from California, their non-stop goal when they left Le Bourget Field in Paris 38 hours and 28 minutes before.

But they achieved the fame of being first to fly the Atlantic in both directions and were the second to make the westward crossing from Paris to New York.

Their own long distance flight record, set last year from New York to Syria in the same ship, still stands.

Not So Bad, at That.

The first words of the weary fliers reflected their disappointment. Then after a brief rest at a hotel—and a quart of chilled champagne—they agreed the flight performance was not so bad, after all.

"I am very, very sorry," said Lieut. Codos, in French, at the airport. "We had enough gasoline to go on. We had 3,000 liters left and we wanted very much to go on to San Diego and the Pacific Ocean. But the wings were vibrating, so we thought it best to come down."

Capt. Rossi, who piloted the ship to its landing, said as he climbed wearily from the controls:

"I am not at all happy.

"We are not content. We are disappointed not to be able to complete the flight for the prize." He referred to the offer of $66,000 by the French Government for the non-stop distance flight they had contemplated.

Doesn't Envy Dead Heroes.

Rossi, whose elevation to a captaincy in the Air Corps was announced by the French Government just about the time the Lebrix soared over the American mainland, finally observed:

"It is better to be here alive than a hero dead."

Soviet Rejects American Plan To Settle Debts

Reds Spurn Roosevelt's Basis for Payment of Kerensky Bills.

Moscow, May 28 (AP).—Rejection by the Soviet government of an American proposed basis for negotiation for settlement of Russia's pre-revolutionary debt was revealed today.

The details of the proposal were not revealed. It was understood they were similar to those proposed by President Roosevelt to Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, while they were discussing recognition.

The State Department at Washington submitted the proposal to Ambassador Troyanovsky, who was instructed by his government to reject it.

Revelation of the rejection explained to some extent the resentment in Moscow against the ruling of United States Attorney General Cummings that Russia is a defaulter under the Johnson act and consequently not entitled to American credit.

It has been the contention of the Soviet government that failure to recognize and settle the debts incurred by the Kerensky government should not classify the present regime as defaulting.

No comment was available last night at the State Department on Moscow reports that the Soviet government had rejected an American proposal for settlement of outstanding debt questions.

Earlier in the day Secretary Hull had said there was nothing new in the debt negotiations, which, he added, were still going on.

Mother Gives Birth to Five Girls; All Well

She Now Has 10, Oldest 7; "I Should Be in Jail," Says Frail Dad.

Corbell, Ont., May 28 (AP).—Five baby girls, the largest weighing 3 pounds and 4 ounces and the smallest a pound less, were born today to Mrs. Oliva Dionne in her farm home 2 miles from here.

Visitors found the 24-year-old mother and the babies in good condition and the father, seven years older than his wife, busy at his chores.

There are five other children in the family, the oldest, Ernest, being 7. One other child of the couple, who were married in September, 1925, died.

"Oh, pretty good," said Mrs. Dionne after her French nurse interpreted to her inquiries as to how she was feeling.

"Well, do you feel proud of yourself?" the father was asked.

"I'm the kind of fellow they should put in jail," he answered.

They Can Howl.

French Plane Lands In Brazil With Mail

Natal, Brazil, May 28 (AP).—The Arc-en-Ciel (Rainbow), trimotored French mail plane, arrived here at 2 p. m. E. S. T., today after a flight from St. Louis, Senegal.

The plane, carrying 300 pounds of mail for South America, made the 1,900-mile trip in approximately 14 hours. Jean Mermoz piloted the ship, with M. Dabry as navigator.

House Passes District Slum Removal Bill

Post's Drive Bears Fruit; Senate Expected to Concur Readily.

The way was paved yesterday for the Capper-Norton alley dwelling bill to become a law when the House passed the measure as amended by the District Committee without opposition and without debate.

The bill, which is in accord with the campaign conducted by The Washington Post, passed the Senate late in the last session, but in a slightly different form, and consequently it will have to be acted on again in the Senate. No opposition to changes is anticipated, however.

Once the bill becomes a law, the President will be empowered to designate an agency that will set about eliminating some of Washington's slums. The agency will be authorized to use an anticipated grant of $500,000 by the Public Works Administration from a fund earmarked for the purpose.

Original Bill Opposed.

The original bill, which passed the Senate, provided that the money should be obtained from an unexpended balance of the United States Housing Corporation. This was opposed by the director of the budget. When the measure was amended to substitute PWA funds, however, the budget director approved the bill as being in keeping with the President's financial policy.

It is estimated that at present there are 10,000 persons living in alley dwellings in Washington "under conditions that tend to foster crime, dependency and disease." The Capper-Norton bill is designed to correct this condition insofar as the $500,000 extends.

The House bill also differs from the Senate bill in that it limits the purchasing prices of alley property to 30 per cent in excess of the assessed value of any square.

Corporation Authorized.

The bill authorizes the President to designate an agency, which shall be known as "the authority," to administer the law. To aid in providing and equipping low-cost modern houses to replace the alley hovels a limited dividend corporation, the dividends of which shall not exceed 6 per cent, is authorized.

The bill makes it unlawful to use or occupy any alley dwelling in the District after July 1, 1944, and prohibits the construction of any more alley dwellings.

The work of clearing Washington's slums is expected to extend over a decade, and more money probably will be granted by the PWA above the original $500,000. The authority is required to make annual reports to the President and to Congress.

Four Dead in Chilean Tornado.

Conception, Chile, May 28 (AP).—At least four persons were dead and a score were in hospitals today following a tornado which cut obliquely across the center of the city yesterday.

Seven in D. C. Bandit Gang Are Named; Hunt Starts

Two Escaped Convicts From Lorton Are Included.

Two Women Also Among Suspects

Linked With Series of Shootings, Holdups in This Area.

Seven members of a tri-State gangster band—five men and two women—have been named as suspects in a recent series of major crimes in Washington and vicinity, The Post learned last night.

The gang, it was revealed, includes two escaped convicts from Lorton Reformatory, suspects in the shooting of Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Fontaine and members of a gunmen band believed responsible for robbing a United States mail convoy and shooting an armed guard at Union Station last December.

As named in a Postoffice Department circular soon to be distributed, the suspects are:

William Davis, 40, escaped convict and "pal" of William B. Phillips, gunman and gang leader killed by Policeman John Caton at Ontario place and Adams Mill road northwest April 10.

Herbert Myers, 39.

Robert Mais, 28, suspect in the shooting of Mrs. Fontaine at Upper Darby, Pa., last month.

Arthur Misanas, 37, underworld leader.

John Kendrick, 39, also an escaped convict and said to be the third gunman at the scene as Phillips was killed in the battle with police.

Barbara Kendrick, 28, wife of the former Lorton inmate, and Marie McKeever, 34, believed to be a companion of Mais.

Wide Hunt Planned.

Postal inspectors, agents of the Department of Justice, and police of several Eastern States, will take up the hunt. The gang is wanted for numerous robberies and shootings in and near Philadelphia; armed holdups in Baltimore and hi-jackings at various points in Virginia and Maryland.

Members of the band also are believed responsible for a $30,000 cigarette hi-jacking near Welden, N. C. It was following this crime that police here received information that led to the killing of Phillips.

The Postoffice circular describes each gang member as "well dressed and quiet." As a center of operations the gang usually rents a furnished apartment, authorities reported, and from there conduct carefully planned depredations.

During summer months a seaside resort usually is chosen as a "hangout," the circular stated.

Police officers were warned to use

Soviet Bread Price And Wages Increase

Admits Wheat Is Damaged by Drought.

Moscow, May 28 (AP).—In its first public admission of drought damage to the wheat crop, the Soviet government today ordered the price of rationed bread increased on June 1.

A general raise in salaries and wages of all persons receiving minimum pay also was decreed to offset the higher cost of living.

The decree, issued by the council of people's commissars and the central committee of the Communist party, did not give the amount of the bread increases, but detailed at length the salary changes, which range from 7 to 16 per cent.

Doctors Fear Rolph's High Blood Pressure

San Francisco, May 28 (AP).—Extreme high blood pressure caused concern today to physicians who are watching Gov. James Rolph, jr., of California, in critical condition at a Santa Clara ranch.

The pressure, with its constant danger of causing a sudden heart attack or cerebral hemorrhage, Dr. J. M. Scanland said, is wearing down Gov. Rolph's resistance.

Actress, 23, Is Charged With Murder in Crash

Los Angeles, May 28 (AP).—The district attorney's office lodged a murder charge today against Thelma Cortez Allen, 23-year-old actress, as a result of the death of William J. Redmond, radio technician, from injuries received in a traffic accident Saturday.

Originally Miss Allen was accused of drunken driving.

65,000 Pay $250,000 To See Ring Contest

Jimmy McLarnin (on scales) and Barney Ross weighing in.

Madison Square Garden Bowl, New York, May 28 (AP).—Barney Ross, of Chicago, pounded out a 15-round decision over Jimmy McLarnin, of Berkeley, Calif., tonight to win the world welterweight championship.

A crowd of 65,000 paid $250,000 to see the fight.

The Fight by Rounds.

"Coin" Harvey Better, Physicians Declare

St. Louis, May 28 (AP).—The condition of William Hope (Coin) Harvey, 83-year-old free silver advocate under treatment for a broken hip, was reported "slightly better" tonight.

Physicians said he stood his train trip here well and described his condition as "serious, but hardly critical." The former Liberty Party Presidential candidate was brought to a hospital today from his home at Monte Ne, Ark., where he fractured his hip in a fall.

Rioters Battle 'Frisco Police; Scores Hurt

500 Officers Hurl Gas and Fire Shotguns on Longshoremen.

Developments yesterday in the Nation's strike situation were:

Bullets, rocks and tear gas were used in fierce fighting incident to San Francisco longshoremen's strike.

Two men were beaten badly by mobs in New Orleans waterfront disorders.

A showdown was sought by mediators in Toledo's Electric Auto-Lite strike deadlock while removal of State troops was demanded in view of threats of a general city-wide strike.

San Francisco, May 28 (AP).—Fierce rioting broke out on the waterfront here and at San Diego late today,

"High-Ball" Killing Motion Filed.

Greenwood, Miss., May 28 (AP).—A motion for a new trial for Dr. Sara Ruth Dean, under sentence of life imprisonment for the alleged "poisoned high-ball" slaying of Dr. J. Preston Kennedy, was filed here today.

Armed Havana Terrorists Attack U. S. Embassy Auto

Havana, May 28 (AP).—Anti-American terrorists today followed up their attack on the residence of Ambassador Jefferson Caffery by waylaying the automobile of the First Secretary of the Embassy and breaking the windshield.

The First Secretary, H. Freeman Matthews, was not in the car at the time. One of the four gunmen who forced the chauffeur to the curb remarked as he struck the windshield with his pistol: "This is for Matthews."

After the attack, Ambassador Caffery revealed that the shooting at his residence last night, resulting in the serious injury of a soldier guard, was the second such attempt, the house having been fired upon three weeks ago.

"We want to tell you to get out of Havana within two weeks," Matthews' chauffeur, Charles Taylor, of Washington, quoted one of the gunmen as saying. "This is your last trip to town. Don't drive Matthews' car any more."

The official car was forced to the curb by the gunmen's machine, which carried no license plates, Taylor said.

The attack occurred as he was driving along fashionable Fifth avenue, not far from the Ambassador's residence, after taking Matthews to the embassy from his home in Country Club Park.

The gunmen's threats intensified the police precautions against anti-American elements in Havana, who were described Saturday by police officials as plotting to kill the Ambassador and destroy property of citizens of the United States.

The gunmen were armed with machine guns and pistols, the chauffeur said. They pulled alongside him and forced him to stop after threatening him with the weapons.

After the shooting last night a special session of the Cuban cabinet was called, and it was understood that acts of terrorism against Americans were discussed at length.

Foes Predict NRA Doom As Johnson Curbs Codes

Schall and Britten Hail End of Price-Fixing in Seven Groups.

Move Is Termed Start of Crack-up

Recovery Heads Assert Changes Are Only to Bolster Drive.

NRA beat a retreat yesterday from regulation of seven troublesome service trades while Congressional critics heralded the move as "the cracking up" of the recovery unit.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, acting to localize codes with the approval of President Roosevelt, as exclusively predicted by The Washington Post, issued an order sweeping out of existence price-fixing and fair practice provisions of seven compacts: Cleaning and dyeing, motor vehicles' storage and parking, barber shops, shoe repairing, bowling and billiards, advertising display installation and advertising distribution.

Officials expected similar action within a week on pacts for hotels, restaurants and perhaps a few other service trades as NRA conceded the futility of trying to enforce minimum prices for such businesses on a National scale.

Britten Sees "Cracking."

"The cracking up of NRA has started," asserted Representative Fred Britten (Republican), Illinois.

He predicted the next step of NRA would be "to announce that the steel, oil and practically every other important code is operating in violation of the law in the direct promotion of monopolies."

Senator Thomas D. Schall (Republican), Minnesota, joined the chorus of opposition by ridiculing NRA for ever seeking to regulate barber shops and similar businesses. He termed it "the failing NRA" and "the crack-down game that knocked industrial production down 25 per cent in 90 days."

Recovery chieftains heatedly denied NRA is collapsing. They

Convict Cleared After 16 Years

Mail Robber in Georgia Confesses Slaying He Pinned On Other.

Rome, Ga., May 28 (U.P.).—An unexpected confession to a slaying that occurred 16 years ago revealed today that an innocent man is serving a life sentence in Atlanta Federal Penitentiary.

Thomas F. Carden and two other men were awaiting sentence before Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood in United States District Court here today on charges of robbing postoffices at Berryton and Lyerly, Ga.

The courtroom was startled when Carden suddenly said he wanted to confess to beating Charles L. Earle to death with a blackjack at Fort Oglethorpe in 1918.

Carden was a prosecution witness in the trial in which Bert Long was convicted of the crime 16 years ago. Long started serving a life sentence at Atlanta June 11, 1918.

Carden said the matter had weighed heavily on his conscience and he could not stand to let the innocent man stay in prison any longer.

The judge who presided at Long's trial, the jury foreman and half the jury that found him guilty are now dead.

The court said proceedings would be started immediately to free Long. It was reported that Congress would be asked to pay the innocent man for the 16 years he has served in prison.

Wheat Nears $1 Mark in Drought

Price Climbs as Torridity Adds to Damage.

Chicago, May 28 (AP).—Torrid weather in the wheat-producing Northwest that intensified prolonged drought was the impetus today for feverish buying that hoisted prices almost to a dollar a bushel.

Other grains, particularly corn and oats, were snapped up by traders as the bullish sentiment, which had been checked temporarily by last week's scattered rainfall, was unbridled again on receipt of increasing reports of widespread damage to crops.

July and September deliveries of wheat and oats and the September options of corn and barley sold at new high prices for the season.

Cleveland Cab Strikers Riot

One Woman Hurt; Nine in Wild Battle Are Arrested.

Cleveland, May 28 (AP).—Rioting for almost an hour, striking taxi drivers and sympathizers smashed the windows of four cabs in downtown Cleveland late today when the operating company attempted to take ten of its machines on the street under police escort.

One woman was hurt slightly as a bolt hurled at a taxi ricocheted off it and struck her in the leg.

Nine persons were arrested, charged with disorderly conduct, and traffic was tied up for 20 minutes in the city's main thoroughfare, Euclid avenue.

The warfare, a renewal of that initiated Saturday when the Yellow Cab Co. attempted to operate its machines over the protest of the strikers, turned the downtown sector into a scene of wildest confusion.

Lost While Fishing, Boy, 10, Found Dead

Body Discovered in Wilds of California.

Northfork, Calif., May 28 (AP).—Ten-year-old Richard McPherson was found dead today, two days and three nights after he became lost with two others on a fishing trip into the wild Rock Creek country in the Sierra National Forest. He was the son of Chester McPherson, a forest lookout.

The body was found in a thick clump of brush about 1,000 feet below the point at which Richard, his older brother, Robert, and their cousin, Howard Ibbotson, 12, camped Friday night.

An examination of the body by searchers disclosed no marks indicating any injury and led them to believe the boy died of exposure.

Texas Jail-Breakers Kidnap Motorists, Flee From Posses

Guthrie, Okla., May 28 (AP).—Three heavily-armed Texas jail breakers who kidnaped two motorists and seized their automobiles today in a wild dash for freedom across Oklahoma were hunted by posses tonight in the Osage Hills badlands.

The outlaws, who released one motorist unharmed after his automobile had been burned out by furious driving, apparently still held their second victim. Police Chief Joe Meyer, of Cleveland, Okla., leader of a posse, reported sighting the fugitives' car near Cleveland, in the southern edge of the Osage Hills, with four men in it.

Earlier, fear had been expressed for the safety of the second man, who had not been identified, because of reports the jail breakers' car had been seen bearing only three men.

Posses quickly blockaded roads in central and northern Oklahoma and southern Kansas and Missouri after the youthful fugitives released Robert Jones, of Dallas, whom they kidnaped between Ardmore and Turner Falls, in southern Oklahoma.

Jones reported his abduction to officers here from a roadside telephone despite a threat of death if he didn't "keep your mouth shut."

As Jones was released the fugitives stopped an unidentified motorist and transferred to his coupe.

The outlaws, George E. Droddy, 19, of Pineville, Mo.; Adrian Petty, 16, Kilgore, Tex., and Roy Batts, 21, Sherman, transferred from one stolen car to that of Jones' when they came upon him at a roadside inn. One of the fugitives exchanged clothes with the motorist.

The three jail breakers sandbagged Jailer W. V. Graham in the Sherman (Tex.) Jail yesterday, crawled through the jail attic and fled in a picnicker's automobile at the point of Graham's pistol. They bragged about their escapade, Jones told the Guthrie officers.

Critics Predict NRA Crack-up In Code Curbs

Price-Fixing Abolished by Johnson in Seven Minor Groups.

pointed out child labor, minimum wage, maximum hours and collective bargaining sections of the service codes remained in force and must be observed by those who fly the Blue Eagle.

Changes Held Needed.

They emphasized that if the dry cleaners, for instance, of a given trade area want to set up their own compact of fair prices and practices, NRA will approve the agreement and attempt to enforce it.

The changes, officials insisted, are simply part of a program to eliminate impracticable code requirements and shake NRA down to a more effective basis. Another move to that end, consolidation of codes for many minor industries, may be announced shortly. Such adjustments, Johnson believes, will relieve NRA of a great burden of controversy and permit greater attention for basic codes.

Johnson's order was silent on legal enforcement for either National or local codes. Observers believed the NRA legal division and United States attorneys would act in extreme cases only.

NRA Breathes Hope.

NRA seemed hopeful that with 85 per cent of service establishments supporting local agreements there would be no necessity for legal protection against chiseling by the minority. The new method was counted on to develop wider use of the Blue Eagle as a business-soliciting measure.

Britten read a roster of prominent industrialists behind the New Deal. Walter Teagle is for it, he said, "because it permits him to fix prices, and what do they (the Standard Oil of New Jersey) care about the consumer or the farmer?"

"Why," he asked, "shouldn't Thomas W. Lamont of J. P. Morgan's be for the New Deal? It would be absurd even to suggest he was not. Charles M. Schwab, of United States Steel—why shouldn't he be? We should examine their heads for lunacy if they weren't. Every pound of steel that moves over the United States today goes under a fixed price, a monopoly.

"But among the supporters you don't see the pictures of Al Smith, former Senator James Reed, of Missouri, Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, or Clarence Darrow—but I'm told Darrow has a very well-defined idea about the New Deal."

Congress Probe Hinted.

Britten warned he would sponsor a resolution for a Congressional investigation unless the NRA halted "price-fixing monopolies."

The Illinois Representative last week came forward with a resolution immediately following publication of the Darrow report which called for an investigation of the National Recovery Review Board's charges of oppression of the small business man through monopolistic practices. It also called on President Roosevelt to stay the proposed dissolvement of the group until the inquiry could be completed.

"The investigation," he asserted yesterday, "would prove beyond the slightest doubt that the NRA is the direct cause of law violations never intended by Congress.

"When I say that the President himself, Gen. Johnson, the Attorney General and the Federal Trade Commission agree that trade monopolies now exist in practically every line of trade endeavor, I know what I am talking about and that they will admit it, when questioned.

"I shall, by Congressional resolution, call upon the Federal Trade Commission to perform its duty and advise Congress concerning the illegality of the price-fixing monopoly-making codes."

Schall Waxes Sarcastic.

Schall pointed out the barber shop code was framed under the power of Congress to regulate interstate and foreign commerce.

"What," he inquired, "has a local barber shop got to do with interstate and foreign commerce? When you get a shave is that interstate commerce? When you get a hair trim is that foreign commerce?

"It might be the kind of foreign commerce which the Administration has in mind under its demand for tariff-making powers—to trim American labor, shave American industries and both shave and trim the agricultural industry through secret White House tariff tinkering."

He cited Government reports on the business trend for the last six months of 1933 in this country, Canada and Great Britain. The United States showed a drop of 28 per cent, he said.

Points to Canada.

"Canada had a never failing upward trend of about 20 per cent in the same period," Schall said. "British production climbed about 18 per cent from July to December and maintained that upward trend. Great Britain even achieved a balanced budget and a treasury surplus while the United States Administration was facing a Treasury deficit of billions."

NRA answered the decline from the July peak represented reaction from industry's big spurt last summer to build up stocks of low cost goods before codes became effective, he contended.

Schall said 10,000,000 persons remained unemployed and complained of price-gouging under NRA.

"When the President goes on his next fishing trip for tarpon," he concluded, "he should not fail to take along a boatload of NRA for ground bait and use Johnson for catching a whale."

Candidates Meet At Denton Service

Denton, Md., May 28 (AP).—Four candidates for Governor of Maryland—Gov. Ritchie, Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, and Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, Democrats, and H. Webster Smith, of Baltimore, Republican—attended the annual Memorial Day exercises here yesterday.

G. O. P. to Pick New Chairman And Meet New Deal 'Head-on'

Feeling Grows Definite Choice Imperative at Chicago Meeting.

By Raymond Clapper.

An inclination to meet the New Deal headon is developing within the higher councils of the Republican Party it developed last night as discussions proceeded among leaders relative to selection of a new party chairman at the meeting of the Republican National Committee in Chicago a week from today.

While there is general feeling that the new chairman must come from the Middle West—the East is considered to be in ill-favor—some influential leaders insist the new chairman must be "sound" on the Constitution and while moderately liberal, must be the type of man to inspire the confidence of the business world.

Republican leaders who early this year were inclined to flirt with the New Deal philosophy, now feel that the Republican Party must stand on its own feet and go to the country on the claim that it is the party of "sound government."

These general phrases translated out of the jargon of politics mean that the Republican Party leaders are beginning to turn thumbs down sharply on many of the experiments in the Roosevelt program.

Reed Victory Helps.

This attitude has been stimulated by the recent victory of Senator David A. Reed in the Pennsylvania Republican Senatorial primary, where, on a platform of opposition to the Roosevelt program, he battled Gov. Gifford Pinchot, who was frankly a New Deal Republican.

Republicans also are encouraged in their anti-New Deal tendencies by the declarations of outstanding Democrats like Senators Glass and Byrd, of Virginia, and Tydings, of Maryland, whose recent utterances are phrased in language much like that heard from the Republican side. With Democrats beginning to speak up in this vein, Republican leaders are losing their earlier timidity.

Republican leaders have scrapped all thought of deferring selection of a new chairman of the National committee until next fall. They are on the contrary, speeding up the hunt for the right man. He has not been found, but leaders are generally agreed that the matter must be decided at Chicago next week.

Recently some party leaders suggested that the party carry on without a chairman until after the fall elections due to the difficulty of finding anyone suitable now. But the concensus as disclosed last night was that this would be a serious error with unfortunate consequences. It would, a number of leaders said, give the impression to the country that the Republican party was bankrupt in leadership. They feel a choice next week is imperative.

Seek Definite Choice.

Party leaders also are unwilling to go to Chicago without a definite choice in mind if they can avoid it. It has been impressed upon them that to assemble without a fairly definite idea of one or two men who might be selected would be to run the risk of a hasty eleventh-hour decision which might be regretted later.

But the man is not yet in sight. Every name put up thus far has been knocked over.

There is strong opposition to choosing anyone from the House or Senate on the ground that members of those bodies have their own election problems. This appeared to eliminate Representative Chester Bolton, of Ohio, cochairman of the Republican joint congressional campaign committee, and Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa, 1932 convention keynoter.

However, Dickinson is not up for reelection this year and might still prove to be a satisfactory choice. He is from the right part of the country, has been a leader in the Republican attack on the Administration, is widely known as the former leader of the House farm bloc and makes a good political speech. His Senate duties, however, might interfere with the traveling and time-eating conferences which go with the chairmanship.

Others Considered.

Others who have been under consideration include Walter J. Kohler, former Governor of Wisconsin, the big bathtub manufacturer; Walter E. Edge, of New Jersey; Silas Strawn, of Chicago, and Walter S. Hallanan, of West Virginia. The Iowa national committeeman, Harrison E. Spangler, a close friend of Herbert Hoover, also has been mentioned—as who has not. Former Senator James E. Watson is supposed to have the most votes lined up. One prominent Republican woman is said to have gone around the country gathering up votes for Jim. He has so much opposition that his chances are not regarded as hopeful. Jim comes from the Middle West and fits the prescription geographically but he is regarded as being too far East in other respects.

Considerable sentiment exists for Edge, a self-made business man with a good record, yet it has been suggested that because he is a brother-in-law of Walter C. Teagle, of Standard Oil, he might be objected to in the West. Kohler, also a successful business man, has been criticized by labor, and while Governor he was the target of an ouster suit based on his campaign expenses. He won, but some feel his selection as chairman might cause old history to be rehashed. So it goes down the line. At the moment the party appears to be searching for the perfect man.

Patience Wears Thin.

"If the perfect man was chosen, somebody probably would object that he was born too long ago," one leader, whose patience is wearing thin, said last night.

The two most influential individuals on the committee appear to be Charles D. Hilles, of New York, and Walter F. Brown, of Ohio, former postmaster general and Herbert Hoover's backstage manager in 1932. Hilles was out of favor during the Hoover Administration because he led the "stop-Hoover" brigade at the 1928 convention. Senator Hastings, of Delaware, cochairman of the joint congressional campaign committe, was in New York yesterday conferring, it is understood, with Hilles as to what should be done at Chicago.

"I think we are going to have an old-fashioned Democratic committee meeting with everybody fighting it out at Chicago," one leader said. "We can't seem to agree in advance."

Everett Sanders, retiring chairman, who has been critically ill and whose physical condition makes his continuation as chairman out of the question, has been back at his office for the last week and will be on hand at Chicago personally to offer his resignation, it was learned.

G.O.P. Women Gather Today

450 to Attends Session at Richmond; Party Leaders to Talk.

Richmond, May 28 (Spl.).—More than 450 reservations have been made for the luncheon here tomorrow in connection with the State-wide conference of Republican women, it was announced today by Aubrey Hawkins, city committee chairman.

Representative Hamilton Fish, jr., of New York, will be the speaker. Large delegations are coming here from several points in the State, Mr. Hawkins announced. Mrs. Felix Parker, of Roanoke, will bring three bus loads, and Mrs. H. E. Page, of Norfolk, will have a similar party. There are numerous reservations from Lynchburg, Harrisonburg, Charlottesville, Staunton and other cities.

Mrs. Ellis A. Yost, of Washington, chairman of the women's division of the Republican National committee, will lead the discussion at the State-wide conference. Mrs. Murray Boocock, of Keswick, National committee woman from Virginia, will preside. The conference will open at 11 o'clock and the luncheon will be at 1 o'clock.

Among the prominent party leaders who will be here are State Chairman Mrs. H. B. McCormac, of Winchester; Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. McWane, of Lynchburg; Maj. and Mrs. Henry A. Wise, of Kiptopeke; Henry W. Anderson and former Representative and Mrs. Menalcus Lankford, of Norfolk.

Two Fight Death; One Dead in Crash

Hagerstown, Md., May 28 (Spl.). Two of three persons injured in an automobile crash last night near here, in which Leon Corder, 18, was killed, remain in a serious condition at the Washington County Hospital.

Carl Lushabugh, 18, and Mary Cornell, 18, Hagerstown, were injured seriously and Mary Teach, 19, less seriously.

All four were occupants of a car driven by Harry A. Anthony, which collided with the car driven by Brig. Gen. Washington Bowie, jr., of Baltimore, who, with several occupants, escaped injury. Anthony is under arrest charged with failing to stop at a boulevard sign and reckless driving.

Kin See Couple Killed by Train

Woman and Husband Die in Crossing Crash.

Waynesboro, Pa., May 28 (Spl.).—A woman and her husband were killed yesterday when their car was struck by a Pennsylvania Railroad train at a grade crossing on the Fayettesville Mont Alto road near here.

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Knight, 53, Camp Hill, near Harrisburg, Pa., died shortly after the accident and her husband, Bruce Knight, 52, died several hours later.

The crash was witnessed by other members of the family riding in a second car. Knight apparently did not see the freight until his auto was on the crossing. The car was carried 62 feet by the locomotive.

Virginia Kiwanians AskRoadAllotment

Bristol, Va., May 28 (Spl.).—Following announcement that Virginia will probably get approximately $7,400,000 of Federal funds for highway construction, Kiwanis clubs of Norton and Big Stone Gap are seeking an allocation to complete Route No. 23 from Moccasin Gap, Va., to the Kentucky State line. The project will require approximately $1,500,000, it is estimated.

Resolutions were adopted at a joint meeting of the Norton and Big Stone Gap clubs, and were sent to the State Highway Department at Richmond.

The resolutions, prepared by J. L. Camblos, of the Big Stone Gap club, pointed out that Route 23 passes through a populous section of the country, intersects with other National highways and carries a great volume of traffic, adding that the highway is "practically complete, except in Virginia," with the result that traffic is being diverted.

Man Shot in Hotel Still in Critical Shape

Hagerstown, Md., May 28 (Spl.). The condition of T. E. Davis, 28, Barton, Md., found shot through the head in his room at a local hotel last night, remained critical today at the Washington County Hospital.

No explanation from Davis was obtained. A maid, knocking for admittance, heard a weak voice tell her to come in. She found Davis on the floor. A revolver, with a discharged shell, was found beside him.

free, until the bell broke them and sent them to their corners.

Round four—McLarnin ducked, bobbed, wove under a stream of left-hand jabs. A half dozen caught his face, but he came up inside with a hard left and right to the body. Jimmy hooked another left hard to the head before Ross, standing up surprisingly well under McLarnin's heaviest fire, tied up the welterweight champion in a clinch. As they broke loose, Barney swiftly banged two lefts to the body and he followed McLarnin into the ropes with both hands pumping furiously to the Irishman's head and ribs. McLarnin caught him coming in with a hard right to the head, but he couldn't stop the flashy little lightweight. A right drummed into Ross' body, but he shot back McLarnin's head with a crashing left hook that wobbled the Irishman's legs. McLarnin thundered both hands into Ross' slim body again, but Barney ripped two more left hooks into McLarnin's head. The bell rang and McLarnin went to his corner with blood trickling from his nose.

Round five—Fighting more cautiously, McLarnin stood in midring and tried to match right hands with the lightweight champion, but Barney had the swifter jab, and Jimmy was forced to block and duck away. Jimmy came back fast with a right that made Barney blink again, but the little fellow shook off the blow and flashed two rights into Jimmy's head. McLarnin threw a long right into Ross' side and Barney flashed back with both hands to the head, drawing fresh blood from McLarnin's nose. Ross chased McLarnin across the ring and rocked him with a crushing volley of rights and lefts to the head. Jimmy wobbled and the crowd roared at the sight of the little man belting the murderous Irishman from one rope to the other. Jimmy got his guard up and was holding Ross off with a left at the bell.

Round six—Blood was still seeping from McLarnin's nostrils as he came out jabbing carefully at the bell. As they sparred in midring, Ross hooked his left fiercely to McLarnin's head, drove him into the ropes and then chivalrously stepped back as McLarnin's head was caught under the upper strand. The crowd cheered as McLarnin freed himself, and Ross came right back with a straight right that started a lump under McLarnin's left eye. Floundering uncertainly, his face blood-smeared, McLarnin managed to throw two long rights into Ross' body. Barney danced around him, flicking with his left, hooking it to the head, until the bell rang and McLarnin walked wearily to his corner.

Seventh round—McLarnin sought desperately to make an opening for his right hand as it became more and more evident that he now had to put the lightweight champion down in order to win. He thumped two lefts on the challenger's chin and drove a hard right into Barney's head, but little Ross bounced right back. Jim smashed a right into Barney's side and a spot the size of his glove glowed red as McLarnin's glove came away. Jimmy drove his challenger across the ring with three lefts to the head, but missed again with a left and left himself open for another of Ross' cutting, lightning-fast left hooks. A right drove into Barney's body and apparently he decided this had gone far enough. He ripped into McLarnin with both hands, flayed him all the way across the ring, and drew fresh smears of blood from the welterweight champion's battered face. They slugged toe to toe on the ropes and were fighting furiously as the bell sounded, so furiously they did not hear the gong and Referee Forbes had to pull them apart.

Round eight—Jimmy poured at Ross' body with a long left, striving to get the little man's guard down. He succeeded, but the left hook he flashed to Ross' head landed high on the challenger's temple. Much steadier now, McLarnin pumped two left hooks into Barney's chin and they belted each other about the body in a clinch. Ross poured a stream of left jabs into McLarnin's head, but Jimmy pulled back and drove a hard right to the jaw. Ross never gave an inch. He hammered right back at McLarnin with two left hooks to the chin and both missed rights and lefts to the head as they started swinging from their sides. McLarnin tried to match Ross' left hook, but Barney hit him five times on the chin to McLarnin's twice. Jimmy's face spouted blood again, and he fell into a clinch as the gong rang.

Round nine—Fresh apparently as if he were just staring out, Ross danced out behind his bitting left hand and flicked McLarnin's soggy features. Jimmy tied him up and they pummeled each other's body in close. McLarnin drove in with a long right to the head, but again the once-stunning wallop in the Irishman's glove merely incited Barney to fury. The lightweight champion stormed back with both hands, into Jimmy's face. As the crowd howled, blood spattered all over his face. As they matched left hooks in midring, McLarnin smashed a short belt to the jaw and Barney was bowled off his feet. He came up without a count and as McLarnin tore in desperately, swinging with both hands, Ross lifted a left hook to the Irishman's jaw and Jimmy flopped over on his haunches. He came right up grinning and they shook hands. They were belting each other furiously again as the gong rang.

Round ten—They came right out in a clinch, both quite weary, and Ross freshened for the first time with the aid of smelling salts in his corner. McLarnin pushed Ross across the ring, driving one good right to the body, but Barney came off the ropes with two thudding left hooks to the chin. A long right and high on the temple shook Ross, but he put down his head and tore into McLarnin savagely with both hands flinging a stream of leather to the Irishman's jaw. McLarnin almost fell from weariness as he missed a left hook and right cross to the head, and Ross ripped furiously with both hands to the Irishman's body. Jimmy danced in an effort to get the spring back in his legs, and they bounced into each other, swinging long rights to the head that shocked them both. They were both wavering slightly at the bell.

Round eleven—They seemed tired as they matched left jabs and Ross retreated all the way to the ropes into McLarnin's glancing right to the body. Jimmy drove three rights to the body as they came off the ropes, but Barney started blood streaming again from McLarnin's nose with a short, stabbing right. There wasn't much on their punches now as they loafed a moment in midring, but it was just a lull before the storm. Each loosed both hands simultaneously in two-fisted volleys to the head. They stood and swapped punches, full smashes, both teetering a bit in the blast. The crowd roared gleefully, but the storm blew itself out and they leaned on each other, swapping lefts and rights in half-hearted fashion, both very tired as the gong rang.

Round twelve—McLarnin stabbed the challenger's face, with a long left jab and Barney answered in kind, neither landing effectively. McLarnin glanced a right off Ross' chin and pounded him into the ropes with both hands, digging deep in the body. They wrestled clear, fell back into another clinch, and Ross held as Jimmy sunk his heavy fists again into the challenger's ribs. Barney started to fight back, but McLarnin caught him with another left hook and right cross to the head, and once more Ross held. Blood was seeping now from Ross' lips. Still concentrating on the body as Barney tired under the fusillade, McLarnin drove the lightweight king into the ropes and kept up a drumming fire. Ross staggered from weariness as he missed a left hook to head just as the gong clanged.

Round fourteen—Referee Forbes signaled to the judges that McLarnin had lost the last round because of a low blow. Ross danced out smartly, poking lefts into Jimmy's face, and they quickly fell into a lugging match in the center of the ring. Ross beat the welterweight champion to the punch with three left hooks to the head, but Jimmy landed one solid left smash on the challenger's chin. They leaned on each other in a clinch, banging each other on the back of the head with both hands. McLarnin speeded up and whipped two crunching left hooks into Barney's chin and Ross held on. He pulled loose quickly, buried both hands in McLarnin's body in a furious exchange, wobbled for a second under a full right smash to the head and then came back with amazing stamina to pummel McLarnin along the ropes. He beat Jimmy consistently to the punch with both hands from then until the bell rang.

Round fifteen—McLarnin tore into Ross desperately, chugging both hands to the body, but Barney met him with a gallant counterfire. They slipped into a clinch and Ross held tightly while McLarnin sought to cave him in with body smashes. Jimmy shifted suddenly to the head and three short jarring left hooks, but gallant little Barney stood toe to toe and slugged it out with him. Finally Barney had to hold, the challenger wavered under a crashing right to the side. It was just for a second, though, the challenger flew bacv HT8HT8RA9RHT8 ger flew back furiously with both hands, belting madly at McLarnin's head and sides. McLarnin staggered slightly as he missed a right, and they stood head to head, with a huge crowd yelling deliriously, wobbling and punching up to the final bell.

They were so tired they had to hang onto each other for support until help came from the corners.

The preliminary program got under way with a four-round victory for Teddy Loder, New York welterweight, over Frankie Cinque, also of New York.

The restless throng, still piling down the aisles, settled somewhat for its first taste of fisticuffs for the evening as Loder, a methodical little fellow, easily belted out a decision but failed to floor his rival. Loder weighed 144 pounds, Cinque, 141¼.

Weather conditions were perfect with the night clear and a cool breeze driving off the heat of the day.

In the second preliminary, Peter Mike, of Southampton, Long Island, once a member of the society stable of fighters whose patron was Edward F. Hutton, financier, fought a four-round draw with Tony Scarpati, sponsored by a couple of fellows from Brooklyn.

The judges disagreed after Peter Mike won the first two rounds, suffered a bloody nose, and lost the next two, so Referee Billy Cavanaugh, boxing instructor at West Point, was called upon to declare the dispute a draw. The bout was slow, there were no knockdowns, and no one was paying much attention anyway.

Scarpati weighed 145½ pounds, Mike, 146.

Arms Embargo For Chaco Area Goes in Effect

Paraguay, Bolivia Affected by Proclamation of President.

movement to stop the Chaco war between Bolivia and Paraguay by drying up the sources of supply, the President signed a proclamation making it unlawful to sell any arms or munitions of war anywhere in the United States to the warring countries or any person representing them.

In his proclamation President Roosevelt declared the prohibition of such sales might contribute to end the disastrous fighting in the interior of South America and that he had consulted with other American republics and been assured of their cooperation. These statements were made necessary by the wording of the joint resolution hurried through Congress last week and signed by Mr. Roosevelt and Vice President Garner a few hours before the proclamation was issued.

Mr. Roosevelt requested Congress for such action last week when it was ascertained that munitions manufacturing nations had shipped many millions of dollars of death-dealing equipment into the jungles where fighting has been going on for more than a year.

Of the grand total, American manufacturers sold $1,050,045 in war implements to Bolivia and $94,843 to Paraguay. The shipments consisted largely of machine guns, aircraft, cartridges, trucks and raw cotton.

The penalty for violation is $10,000 fine, or two years' imprisonment, or both.

To Secretary of State Hull is delegated the power to prescribe exceptions and limitations to the proclamation.

French Fliers Cross Atlantic, But Fail in Goal

"There was nothing wrong with the motor," said the short rotound captain and the taller, broad-shouldered lieutenant. They were escorted through a hurriedly-gathered, small crowd to the administration offices of the field for a few minutes respite.

In the quiet of their hotel suite they said that early in the day they determined to make New York their stopping place and be satisfied for the present.

Last Part of Hop Slow.

"It was slow from Newfoundland to New York," Codos said. "The worst weather started last night just off Newfoundland and for five hours it was complete soup.

"But we knew every minute where we were. Our plane was a 'living laboratory' of scientific apparatus.

"In this thick weather the wings near the rudder began to vibrate and cause trouble. There was no complaint about the propeller, although it has four nicks in it.

"The vibration might have been caused by the heavy load with which we started, but we don't know yet. The load might have weakened the guy wires."

Rossi appeared for the interview in pale blue pajamas, open at the collar, and without shoes. Codos was slightly more formal, wearing a cream-colored shirt and dark blue trousers. He, too, was without shoes. Both had enjoyed short naps.

Gasoline Burns Faces.

Their faces were brick-red, burned by gasoline they had dumped on landing at the airport, and their eyes were slightly bloodshot. They did not appear exhausted, however, from their audacious flight, and talked and gestured excitedly.

The fliers said their present plans are indefinite.

"We are under military service," said Rossi, "and are awaiting instructions from the French government. We probably will be here 15 or 20 days. Our mechanics, ordered to sail from France, will not arrive for at least eight days."

The French airmen said that they became tired and nervous during the long hours over the Atlantic, but never drowsy.

"We were too anxious to get across," said Codos.

Steering Became Tiring.

He explained that the vibration in the wings of their plane caused extreme difficulty in steering, and that it became extremely tiring.

"For the most of the time," he said, "the trip was not too much for two men," meaning, he said with a laugh, that both were kept busy every moment.

The roar of the motor and the fumes from the gasoline gave Rossi a "splitting headache," and he retired before his comrade, who remained gesticulating to newspapermen.

Rossi planned to sleep several more hours, then visit with friends. Codos retired for the night not to be disturbed.

The fliers themselves roughly calculated the distance they flew at between 3,877 and 4,060 miles, far below their international distance record set last August after they took off from Floyd Bennett Airport in the same plane, flying Eastward. Their maximum speed, they said, was 134.3 miles per hour.

New York Caught Napping.

The reception given Rossi and Codos, due to the suddenness of their decision to stop here, hardly was in keeping with that usually accorded to transoceanic victors.

The French consulate was not advised in time to have an attache at the field. Mayor Fiorello La-Guardia was caught in the midst of a busy day. But he hurriedly dispatched a member of his cabinet.

Advised through the naval authorities—in a message sent from the Lebrix to the commander of the United States Fleet via the Navy wireless station at Boston—that the intrepid long-distance aviators would land, the officials at Floyd Bennett hastily made arrangements.

At 1:30 p. m., Eastern standard time, the silver nose of the Lebrix was seen shining in the sky to the northeast. It circled the field, emptying huge quantities of gasoline for a safe landing.

Fire Danger Averted.

That alarmed the airport officials. They feared a fire.

The monoplane settled down, in a perfect land, at 1:38 p. m. Frantically, the officials signaled them to shut off their motor to avoid the ignition of gasoline that soaked the landing field. This was done. The danger was past.

Capt. Rossi, wore the uniform of a lieutenant. Codos was in his shirtsleeves. They were disheveled and grimy, but their faces were wreathed in smiles.

They asked for cigarettes and eager hands supplied them.

Though the crowd was small, about 1,000 persons, in comparison to other landings, it set up quite a bedlam.

In the hurried arrangements to get the fliers to a Park avenue hotel, a group of their compatriots were unable to get in a word of greeting. They were some officers from the French cruiser Jeanne d'Arc, at anchor in New York Harbor on a good-will cruise about the world.

Reception Is Passed By.

A hurried reception was arranged at City Hall by the mayor. But, fatigued and hungry, the fliers went direct to the hotel, ordered a bottle of champagne, drank it, and napped.

They reached the North American mainland at 2 a. m. (Eastern standard time) and sent a message to advise the French Ambassador in Washington.

Then, for several hours, their exact position was unknown. There were conflicting sightings, sometimes several hundred miles apart.

Around 9 a. m. (Eastern standard time) the fliers were sighted over Eastport in Maine. From there they sped down the New England Coast toward Floyd Bennett Field.

Hunted Gangsters and Women Companions

every precaution in making arrests. In directing the hunt, authorities reported that although the gang members "usually conduct themselves quietly, all use intoxicants and frequent gambling houses."

A reward "not exceeding $2,000" has been offered for information leading to arrest and conviction of the gang.

Major crimes in and near Washington, covering a period of more than a year, are laid to the hunted gang.

On the night of December 5, 1933, six quick-moving bandits raided a mail truck at Union Station, shot and wounded an armed Postoffice guard and escaped with three pouches of mail. The loot, however, later was found to be worthless. The bags contained used Federal tax stamps.

Francis J. White, 57, of 2 I street northwest, the postal guard, was only recently released from Providence Hospital.

A few weeks prior to the Union Station robbery, a gang, answering similar discriptions, looted a mail car at Charlottesville, Va., and escaped with pouches containing more than $5,000 in registered mail. Postal authorities definitely link the two "jobs" with members of the hunted gang.

The police slaying of Gunman Phillips led to a spectacular gangland drama. A few days after the shooting, Mrs. Fontaine, admittedly the gangster's sweetheart, was shot and wounded critically in her apartment at Upper Darby. Police held she was "put on the spot because she knew too much."

Woman Helps Police.

Mrs. Fontaine, meanwhile, is in hiding under careful guard of Washington police. She is known to have "talked" regarding widespread underworld activities. Her information, it is believed, is largely responsible for renewed efforts to capture the gang.

Inspector Frank S. W. Burke, Washington detective chief, refuses to discuss the case. It is understood, however, that one of the fugitive gang members is known to be her assailant.

Kendrick and Davis were with Phillips when the latter walked into a carefully planned police trap. Kendrick, one-time bodyguard for Milton (Milsey) Henry, slain racketeer, escaped from Lorton in July, 1933. He is a native Washingtonian and son of a former District policeman. Davis escaped at the same time.

In Pittsburgh last week, Morris (Big George) Kaufmann, also sought in the Fontaine case, was found murdered. It was believed he planned to "turn in" members of the gang and was slain in vengeance.

80,000 Autos Still Unchecked in State

Only Three Days Remain to Comply With Law.

Richmond, May 28 (Spl.).—Eighty thousand Virginia motor vehicles still remain uninspected for mechanical defects, Thursday midnight is the dead line.

The State division of motor vehicles, with its 800 inspection stations, has inspected approximately 180,000 of the 260,000 registered machines.

Cars are inspected free of charge at any official station. If adjustments are necessary the owner may have them made at a standardized rate.

Since the inspection law was passed, automobile accidents in Virginia have been reduced materially.

Winchester Church To Dedicate Annex

Winchester, Va., May 28 (Spl.).—Services dedicating the new Sunday school rooms at Cedar Cliff Presbyterian Church, at Vaucluse, near here, will be held Sunday at 11 a. m., the Rev. Allen Jones, pastor, has announced.

The Rev. Harry M. Crim, Strasburg, will preach, and the Rev. Dr. C. D. Gilkeson, Winchester, will deliver the prayer. Special music will be provided.

The Sunday school annex has been erected by the congregation the last 12 months.

Young Wife Gives Birth to Five Girls

men and photographers, attracted by the report of Dr. A. R. Dafoe, the obstetrician, reached the farm.

A potato scale was produced and each of the loudly howling infants was placed on it.

The little girl identified as the oldest of the five weighed 3 pounds and 4 ounces and the two youngest registered 2 pounds and 4 ounces each. The total weight of all five was 13 pounds and 6 ounces.

The father was torn between pleasure at the unexpectedly large addition to his family and the thought of the financial burden.

He said he is going to do the best he can, but stressed the fact he is not exactly built for hard work, being 5 feet and 8 inches tall and weighing only 130 pounds. His wife is slightly smaller.

Has A Farm And Mortgage.

The Dionnes are buying their farm in this northern Ontario section, which is 9 miles southeast of Sudbury. There still is a heavy mortgage.

None of the Dionne children goes to school yet. The father speaks both English and French, the mother only French.

Mrs. Ben Lebell attended the mother at birth and reported all five girls were born between 4:30 and 5 a. m. Three of them arrived before the doctor did, she said.

The other living children in the family are Pauline, 11 months; Danie, 2 years; Theresa, 5; Rose, 6 and Ernest, 7.

Only 30 Such Births Listed in 500 Years

Chicago, May 28 (AP).—Birth of five children at once, such as occurred today at Corbid, Ont., is so rare, medical historians said today, that only 30 cases have been recorded in the last 500 years.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, added that in none of the cases on record have all the children lived more than 50 minutes.

"If the five girls born to Mrs. Oliva Dionne lived longer than an hour or so," said Dr. Fishbein, "then it is truly a rare and noteworthy event.

"Most of such births occur long before the normal time simply because of pressure and the children are unable to survive."

No ratio of quintuple births has been computed, Dr. Fishbein said, because they are so rare. Twins, the association records showed, occur once in 80 births, triplets once in 6,400 births and quadruplets once in 512,000 births. Only one case is recorded in which all four quadruplets lived to adult age, he said.

There are only six cases of sextuple births on record, he continued.

Medical history, he added, goes back about 500 years and covers all civilized countries.

Southwest Virginia To Present Pageant

300 Characters to Be Seen in Historical Event.

Roanoke, Va., May 28 (Spl.).—More than 300 characters will be seen in a historical pageant depicting the opening and development of southwestern Virginia, to be held here for three days, beginning July 4. The pageant is to be presented by Southwestern Virginia, Inc., in cooperation with the Roanoke Chamber of Commerce, the Retail Merchants Association and other organizations.

On the nights of July 4-6 Maher Field, where the pageant will be presented on a 200-foot stage, is to be transformed into a panorama of changing pictures and stirring scenes presented in song, story and dance. State-wide cooperation is to be sought by the promoters.

Removal of School Official Is Sought

Lancaster, Va., May 28 (Spl.).—A petition will be presented the Lancaster Circuit Court asking the removal of Harvey S. Gresham from the Lancaster County School Board.

Frank G. Lankford and L. R. Payne, other members of the school board, have signed the petition. W. W. Butzner and Wat T. Mayo have been employed as counsel by the petitioners.

It is alleged that as judge of the juvenile and domestic relations court of the county, Mr. Gresham is holding his place on the school board illegally. The court has set June 15 as the tentative date for hearing the proceedings.

Wagner Moves To Avert Strike In Steel Mills

Conference Planned Here With Mike F. Tighe, Union President.

Drastic steps to head off a threatened Nation-wide steel strike will be taken by the Administration, Chairman Wagner, of the National Labor Board, intimated yesterday.

Wagner's announcement of a potential conference here with Mike F. Tighe, president of an American Federation of Labor steel affiliate, followed disclosure by Donald Richberg, NRA general counsel, that he had reached an agreement with steel tycoons on revision of a code for their industry, to be renewed on its expiration Thursday.

The Labor Board chairman telegraphed Tighe to come here from Pittsburgh for discussion of the grievances of his organization. While a reply had not been received last night, it was expected he would accept.

Indications were that Gen. Hugh S. Johnson also would seek to smoke the pipe of peace with the union chieftain.

Companies Accused.

Tighe has complained to both Johnson and Wagner that the steel companies have flouted the collective bargaining provisions of their compact. He has set a mid-June deadline for capitulation by manufacturers if they wish to avert a general "holiday" in the industry.

As president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, Tighe has grown bitter over failure of the steel companies to recognize National unions. He criticized steel executives for declaring they would do everything in their power to deal with labor through employe representation plans, best known as company unions.

Officials have estimated the membership of Tighe's union at 100,000 of the 400,000 now employed in steel mills.

In announcing plans of the American Iron and Steel Institute to "maintain the open shop," Eugene Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, declared the industry would insure to employes "recognition and reward for individual effort as against the closed union shop where all men are equal."

Under Fire for Months.

Negotiations for revision of the steel pact have been in progress at NRA for months, with the original code under fire from the Federal Trade Commission and on Capitol Hill.

Richberg declared the alteration agreed on by NRA representatives and the industry's code committee was almost altogether the result of efforts to "obtain amendments which we considered necessary to the public interest."

He added approval would be necessary by both President Roosevelt and members of the industry, due to vote on the understanding today in New York. Richberg declined to reveal what changes were in prospect.

Johnson, however, recently announced he hoped to amend the much-attacked basing point system of establishing prices for steel so as to relate the basing points to every important point of production. He also favored revision of water rates for steel.

Rioters Battle 'Frisco Police; Scores Injured

500 Officers Hurl Gas and Fire Shotguns on Longshoremen.

sending eight men to hospitals and resulting in less severe injuries to scores of participants, as shippers and striking longshoremen were reported to have reached a deadlock in negotiations to settle the longshoremen's strike.

Tear gas bombs were hurled by police and shotguns were fired into the air as officers sought to halt the fury of a crowd estimated at between 1,000 and 2,000 men, who surged along the embarcadero here. Reports said machine guns had been set up along the waerfront here, but Chief of Police William J. Quinn refused to say what weapons had been placed at the disposal of more than 500 policemen sent to the embattled district.

The disturbance here followed receipts of unconfirmed word that the International Longshoremen's Association had rejected a compromise proposal of shipping men before Federal mediators in another of the many moves made toward settlement of the 19-day-old coast-wide walkout, now involving more than 25,000 men.

Rock Hurler Starts Riot.

A group of men gathered at a vacant lot near the strikers' headquarters and a speaker harangued them, urging them "to show the shippers that we mean business."

Mounted patrolmen hurried to the scene and endeavored to scatter the men. One man hurled a rock and the battle was on.

A mounted officer, attempting to ride back the men from the sidewalk, was jerked from his horse and attacked by several men. Immediately other officers came to his aid and a wild melee ensued. Other mounted patrolmen were hauled from their horses and a call brought more than 500 policemen to the scene in patrol cars.

The milling throng grabbed bricks, sticks and other missiles and hurled them at the officers. Police wielded their clubs and many of the rioters fell.

Rioters Rally, Attack Again.

Driven back by the increasing numbers of patrolmen, the throng quieted momentarily as ambulances entered the district and removed the injured men to hospitals.

Hurriedly rallying, the rioters again bore down on the officers, knocking down the blue-coated men and beating them severely before other policemen could come to their rescue.

Tear gas blinded the police and the rioters as they fought hand to hand.

Three policemen and three rioters were taken to the Harbor Emergency Hospital, suffering from scalp lacerations and tear gas. Four men were placed under arrest as the rioting was quieted.

Fearful that the mob was preparing for a fresh outbreak, Chief Quinn concentrated nearly every officer in the city at the waterfront.

"We are going to take care of this trouble," Chief Quinn said.

Police Fire Shotguns.

Under command of Lieut. Joseph Mignolia, a squad of officers armed with sawedoff shotguns fired above a group of strikers who were attempting to cover their advance on the pier under a barrage of bricks and cobblestones.

Mills Says I. T. U. Didn't Need NRA

Richmond, May 28 (AP).—Clyde M. Mills, of Washington, told members of the Virginia and Carolina units of the International Typographical Union yesterday that their craft had come through the depression better than had any other union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Representing Charles P. Howard, president of the I. T. U., Mr. Mills spoke here at a convention luncheon.

"The International Typographical Union did not need the NRA," Mr. Mills said. "While it has been helpful in a way, we would have made the progress we have made through recent years without it. The record will show that the Typographical Unions have come through the depression, to this time, better than any other unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. We have come through with less reduction in wages than any other grade in this country—a reduction of 11 per cent."

Carroll County Building Drops

$92,391 Is Total of New Construction During Past Year.

Westminster, Md., May 28 (Spl.). Building operations during the past year in Carroll County show a slight decrease from the previous 12-month period, according to the record of the tax assessors, which lists $92,391 new properties in the county.

More dwellings were erected during the past year than any other type of property, with a total of 44 new homes listed. Other new property includes 24 garages, 15 miscellaneous buildings, 9 barns, 6 business properties, 5 additions to properties and 2 silos.

Homes also head the list from the standpoint of value, the 44 dwellings being assessed at $62,975. Business property is assessed at $11,950; barns, $5950; garages, $4,441; miscellaneous buildings, $3,375; additions to properties, $2,800; and silos, $900.

Westminster District, with new property valued at $25,575, leads the county in building activity. With three of the assessors failing to report any new property, the records show the following total new assessments: Woolery's, $21,550; Sykesville, $12,466; Berrett, $12,200; Manchester, $7,250; Hampstead, $6,550; Taneytown, $3,950; New Windsor, $1,350; Middleburg, $800; and Uniontown, $700.

Two Victims of Mobs' Wrath in New Orleans

New Orleans, May 28 (AP).—Attacked by yelling mobs in separate encounters, two men were beaten severely today in the "strike" area on the waterfront.

Pascal Guglielmo, 18, a banana carrier, was attacked, police said, shortly after he started home from his job of unloading bananas from a vessel on the waterfront. Officers found him lying on the pavement unconscious.

Louis Carter, 3, colored, was the other man attacked. Police reported that a mob of colored men jumped into the path of a coffee-laden truck Carter was driving and caused the machine to crash into the curbing. Carter suffered a fractured arm when struck by a stone.

Cab Insurance In D. C. Beaten; 22 Bills Pass

McLeod Measure Adopted as Old-Age Pensions Are Sacrificed.

Acting on the last District day of the current session, the House yesterday passed 22 bills and defeated the compulsory taxicab insurance bill which has passed the Senate and has been vainly urged by District agencies for several years.

At the same time the House adopted without debate the McLeod bill requiring liability insurance of all Washington auto owners who fail to pay judgments in traffic cases or who are convicted of violating certain traffic regulations.

Should this bill pass the Senate, which is not expected because of the opposition of Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, it would impose insurance on taxicab operators, as well as private vehicle owners, under the same conditions and with a higher liability than provided in the taxicab measure.

Bill Failed Before.

A similar bill passed the House in the Seventy-first Congress and was favorably reported in the Senate but failed to pass. It is sponsored by the American Automobile Association.

Auto owners who are convicted of driving while intoxicated, leaving the scene of an automobile accident without making their identity known, or of other traffic violations that constitute cause for suspension of licenses, are required to take out liability insurance under the terms of the bill. Similarly, District residents who are convicted of such offenses in any State are compelled to obtain insurance.

Likewise, any auto owner who fails to pay a judgment resulting from a traffic accident either in the District or a State is required to carry liability insurance.

The traffic director is empowered to suspend a driver's permit or license until the auto owner complies with the terms of the bill.

$5,000 Is Low Limit.

Insurance must provide protection of $5,000 for personal injury or death or $10,000 for injury or death of two or more persons and property damage of $1,000.

Patman, Blanton and others who opposed the taxicab insurance bill contended that the McLeod bill obviated the necessity for passage of the former. They contended that it would raise taxi fares, drive hundreds of independent cab operators off the streets, and enrich only the insurance companies, "ambulance-chasing" lawyers and persons who filed frivolous claims.

During the debate Patman engaged in a verbal duel with Representative Carpenter (Democrat), of Texas, who observed at one point: "Oh, you're one of those persons who believes in sending flowers instead of taking out insurance."

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Michigan, made a vigorous fight for the bill, explaining to the House that the protection would be worth more than a slight increase in fares.

Old Age Bill Sacrificed.

The old age pension bill, which carries the indorsement of local officials and agencies, was sacrificed by the District Committee to appease Representative Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, who otherwise had threatened to wreck the entire calendar.

The acting committee chairman, Representative Palmisano (Democrat), Maryland, agreed not to present the bill before the session began, as Blanton had twice blocked its enactment by parliamentary tactics.

Meanwhile, its sponsor, Representative Norton (Democrat), New Jersey, chairman of the District of committee, was in Jersey City nursing her critically ill husband. That many members of the House favored passage of the measure, despite Blanton's filibuster, was indicated when Representative Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, remarked:

"Why doesn't the committee bring up the old-age pension bill? Why it's worth more than all the rest of the bills put together."

Blanton Announces Bargain.

Blanton announced at the outset, however, that the committee had agreed not to present the bill and he in turn had agreed not to try to block consideration of the other District bills on the calendar.

Eleven of the bills which passed the House have been passed by the Senate, two others have been reported favorably and two more are scheduled to be acted on Thursday by the Senate District Committee.

The only measure which aroused any controversy yesterday was the bill to require financial responsibility of all taxicab drivers. After an hour's debate it was defeated by a roll call vote of 187 to 129.

The House's two fiery Texans, Blanton and Patman (Democrat), of Texas, led the onslaught on the bill. The majority of House members followed them like sheep, treading down Palmisano and other members of the District Committee.

Cab Rate Rise Feared.

The chief fear of the House, which has for three years prevented the Public Utilities Commission from enforcing meter rates for taxicabs, appeared to be that the insurance bill would raise taxicab rates to the public and their constituents.

Other bills which passed the House are, in brief, as follows:

To authorize the Secretary of the Interior, with the approval of the Attorney General and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, to settle certain land claims along the Potomac and Anacostia River and Rock Creek. Passed the Senate.

To extend the benefits of the parole act to District prisoners in Federal prisons. Passed the Senate.

To authorize an appropriation of $3,600 to educate orphans of World War veterans, above 18 years of age, who desire to go beyond high school.

Tenley Site Sale Approved.

To authorize the District Commissioners to sell the Tenley School site to St. Ann's Church, despite the opposition of the Commissioners.

Two amendments to the District liquor aut: One to lower the license fee for marine vessels from $50 to $2 a month provided they operate over a course of 100 miles or more; and another to exempt spirits exported from the District from local taxation.

To provide pensions for needy blind residents of Washington, the amount in each case to be determined by the Board of Public Welfare.

To amend the fire escape act so as to relieve owners of three-story apartment houses, converted from dwellings, from the necessity of building fire escapes, under certain conditions. Passed the Senate.

To protect holders of industrial life insurance policies. Passed the Senate.

Water-Front Rules Planned.

To authorize the District Commissioners to set up and enforce regulations to govern Washington's water-front.

To prevent misrepresentation and deception in the sale of milk by defining the size of containers and controlling labels.

To change the name of Four-and-a-half street southwest to Fourth street. Passed the Senate.

To grant a Federal charter to Columbus University. Favorably reported to the Senate.

To grant $5,000 to Jennie Bruce Gallahan above her pension for the accidental death of her husband, a lieutenant in the fire department.

To clear the title on property owned by four Hohenlohe brothers.

Taxation Exemptions Granted.

Three bills to exempt from taxation the properties of the American Legion, the Daughters of 1812, and the Sons of the American Revolution. The second bill has passed the Senate, and the first has been reported favorably.

To extend Mount Olivet Cemetery.

To dissolve the Ellen Wilson Memorial Homes Corporation. Passed the Senate.

Oddly enough, a bill to legalize the birthday of Thomas Jefferson was overlooked, and the bill to transfer the administrative powers of the Board of Public Welfare to the District Commissioners was passed over because of lack of interest by the Commissioners.

Dr. W. C. White Rites Set Today Near Staunton

Presbyterian Pastor Dies After Nearly 50 Years in Church.

Staunton, Va., May 28 (Spl.).—Funeral services for the Rev. Dr. William C. White, D. D., who died of a heart attack in Montreat, N. C., Saturday, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at Loch Willow Church, Churchville, eight miles west of here. He was a former moderator of the Presbyterian Synod of Virginia.

Dr. White had served the Churchville Presbyterian group of churches—Loch Willow, Union, Zetta, and Buffalo Gap—since 1909. Lacking one year, he had been in the ministry for half a century, having been licensed to preach by the West Hanover Presbytery in 1885, and ordained by Lexington Presbytery two years later.

From 1886 to 1887 he was stated supply of the Warm Springs group in Bath County, in the latter year being called by the group as its pastor; a relation that existed until 1909, when he resigned to accept the call to Churchville.

He was born in Salem, Mass., October 25, 1858, a son of a Presbyterian preacher, and came to Virginia with his father when the latter accepted a call to the college church at Hampden-Sydney College. He attended Hampden-Sydney College and its theological seminary, and also studied at the University of Virginia. He was a member of Beta Theta Pi Fraternity.

After completing his education he went to Charles Town, W. Va., where he taught at the Charles Town Military Academy. In 1885 he was licensed to preach, later taking up the work at Warm Springs, where he served churches at Warm Springs, Greenwood, Hot Springs, and Healing Springs, all in Bath County.

For more than 30 years Dr. White had been stated clerk of Lexington Presbytery, a record that is outstanding in the history of the Southern Presbyterian Church. He had attended many meetings of the general assembly—and was on this mission when stricken with heart failure. He was attending this year's session as a commissioner from this presbytery.

Dr. White was twice married, his first wife being the former Miss Nannie Edwards Finley, of Romney, W. Va. After her death he married her sister, Miss Martha Finley, who died in February 1933.

By the first union Dr. White leaves the following children: Mrs. N. L. Allen, New York City; Mrs. F. A. Bear, Churchville; Mrs. J. E. Bear, Richmond; Mrs. John M. Irvine, Rutherford, N. J.; William C. White, jr., Richmond; and by the second union: Miss Pattie Finley White, Miss Lucille Booker White, Miss Virginia Ruth White, and Miss Elizabeth Felt White, all of Churchville.

800 Attend Sale and Field Day Of Maryland Cattle Breeders

Westminister, Md., May 28 (Spl.).—Attended by approximately 800 persons, the fourth annual field day and sale of the Maryland Ayrshire Breeders Association was held last week at Silver Run Farm, near Mayberry.

With Cuthbert Nairn, of Sycamore Farm, near Elizabethtown, Pa., as judge, the show of sale cattle was held in the morning. Winners of the show were announced as follows:

Females, over 3 years old, first, Lafayette Farms, Upperco, Md.; second, A. W. Feeser, Silver Run, Md.; third, Philip Knatz, Owings Mills, Md.

Red heifers, first, Lafayette Farms; second, A. W. Feeser; third, Ralph Weybright, Detour, Md. Open heifers, first, James H. Almoney, White Hall, Md.; second, A. W. Feeser; third, Dr. Dickerson Gorsuch, Timonium, Md. Bulls, first, A. W. Feeser; second, Edward Stansfield, Randallstown, Md.

Grand champion female, Lafayette Farms. Best 4-H Club heifer, T. Jerome Heaps, Street, Md.

Preceding the sale, Dr. E. S. Deubler, of Pennhurst Farm, near State College, Pa., spoke on "Breeding Ayrshires," and T. P. Whittaker, representative of the Ayrshire Breeders Association, conducted a demonstration on scoring cows.

The average price for Ayrshires was approximately $77; the highest quotation listed was $102.50. Three calves sold for $75. According to State association officials, who announced that 49 Carroll County dairymen have one or more cows registered with the Ayrshire Breeder's Association, the field day and sale was the best ever held in Maryland.

Police Baffled Hunting Slayer Of Miss Sheads

Suspect With Long Record as Housebreaker Held for Examination.

Police last night admitted they were "stumped" for solution of the slaying of Miss Mary E. Sheads, retired teacher, found dead in her apartment last Thursday night.

Another colored suspect was jailed, but investigators placed small hope on his ability to shed light on the case. He was arrested, police reported, because he was unable to explain his whereabouts the night of the murder. He has a long record for housebreakings.

Inspector Frank S. W. Burke, chief of detectives, ordered a general lookout for the apprehension of any suspicious appearing colored man bearing visible marks of violence.

Nearly a score of suspects have been arrested, questioned and released during the investigation. Police admit they are no nearer solution than they were the night Miss Sheads' body was found in her rooms at the Balfour Apartments, 2000 Sixteenth street northwest.

The newest suspect will face Dr. E. R. Donaldson, District microanalyst, for examination. From particles of skin beneath Miss Sheads' fingernails, Dr. Donaldson determined her assailant was colored.

BLACKIE BEAR
By D. SAM COX

Howler Comes Home to Trouble.

When Howler and Hound Dog got back to Uncle Joe's gate, they saw the note that Blackie had tacked up. Then they hurried on into the yard to see what all had been done. It certainly did look awful to Howler, and he didn't know what on earth to tell Uncle Joe when he came home.

Of course Howler thought Blackie Bear was dead and so he didn't think anything like this could happen; but that wouldn't be any sort of an excuse to give to Uncle Joe. He must fix up some other story to tell him, or else he must run away. Oh, oh, oh, if he just hadn't run away Saturday night! He went out to Chicken yard to see how many chickens were gone, and he saw that several hens and three or four big roosters were gone.

Yes, and Uncle Joe's very biggest turkey gobbler. Oh, what would Uncle Joe do to him? He would just beat him most to death, that's what he would do! He actually whined, and there were tears in his eyes as he asked Hound Dog what on earth he was to do.

"There are just two things that we can do," said Hound Dog. "One is for us to run all over the yard and scratch and roll around in the dirt, so it will look like you had fought Blackie Bear and the others as hard as you could to keep them from taking Uncle Joe's things, and then for me to lock you up in the back porch so you can't get out, and then you can tell Uncle Joe what a fight you had before Blackie whipped you and locked you up.

"Of course he wouldn't expect you to whip Blackie and Dr. Coon and the whole crowd, and so he wouldn't be mad with you.

"The other thing is for you to do all the things I just said about running around the lot and scratching up things so he would see your tracks with the others. Then you could go away with me, and Uncle Joe would think that Blackie had either killed you or tied you and taken you away with him.

"Of course I would rather you would go with me, for I don't want to leave you here, even if Uncle Joe would be good to you; but I really do hate for Uncle Joe to be left without any dog at all just after having such bad luck.

"So maybe you had better stay here till he comes back, and I will get my friend, Jay Bird, to fly over here in a day or two and you can tell him how Uncle Joe is treating you. If he is mean to you, you just leave him and follow Jay Bird.

"I had better not be here when Uncle Joe comes back, and you mustn't tell him about ever seeing me or knowing anything about me. Are you sure Uncle Joe won't be back tonight?"

"Yes, I am sure; for he told me he wouldn't get back till most dinner time Monday; but I wish you would stay with me tonight; for I am afraid Blackie Bear might come back. I don't want to stay here by myself."

"Well, I guess I can stay," said Hound Dog, "and I will get up and leave early in the morning before Uncle Joe comes back."

Then they went into the back porch and had their supper, for Blackie hadn't been on the porch at all and hadn't bothered the food that Uncle Joe had left there for Howler.

After supper they talked it all over and decided that Howler must tell Uncle Joe what an awful time he had had fighting Blackie and the other animals before they had all piled on him and shut him on the porch and locked the door.

So after they had fixed the story all up they went to sleep. Next morning when the first rooster crowed for the day, Hound Dog got up, and after telling Howler that he would have Jay Bird to tell him when and where they would meet again, he went out and locked the door so that Howler couldn't get out, and there is where Uncle Joe found him when he got back.

The clean Center Leaves are the mildest leaves

They Taste Better!

WE like to tell about the finer tobaccos in Luckies—the choicest Turkish and domestic, and only the mild, clean center leaves—they cost more—they taste better. Then "It's toasted"—for throat protection. But we're just as proud of the way Luckies are made. They're so round and firm, so free from loose ends. That's why Luckies "keep in condition"—do not dry out. Luckies are always—in all-ways!—kind to your throat.

Defense Pleas Delay Coblentz Trial's Start

Argument on 2 Motions to Dismiss Charges Resumes Today.

Baltimore, May 28 (Spl.).—Argument on two legal motions filed in behalf of Senator Emory L. Coblentz, of Frederick, today delayed the start of his trial on charges of fraudulent corporate misrepresentation in connection with the collapse of the Central Trust Co. three years ago.

Coblentz was scheduled to go on trial this morning in criminal court before two judges, but the court had ruled last week that before he was arraigned a ruling was to be made on a plea by the Senator-banker's attorney, Leo Weinberg, that his client already had been tried on similar charges at Cumberland last year. To try him again, Weinberg argued, would be to put Coblentz in double jeopardy.

Argument was heard on that motion today, and also on another motion filed by Weinberg, asking dismissal of the indictment against Coblentz on the ground the banker did not knowingly publish the alleged false statements, of which he is accused.

After the argument today, Weinberg was instructed by the court to amend both his pleas and to argue them again tomorrow. State's Attorney James Clark, of Howard County, and State's Attorney Herbert R. O'Connor, of Baltimore, will argue against granting the pleas.

Earlier today, a conference of defense counsel and prosecuting attorneys was held in Judge George A. Solter's chambers, and it was agreed that depositions of 35 witnesses out of the 52 summoned would be accepted at the pending trial in lieu of the personal appearance of the witnesses.

This decision probably will result in a material shortening of the trial. It had been expected the case would extend over from six to ten weeks, but the action today will cut the time by a week or more, it is expected.

Coblentz was indicted in Howard County last August 3. If any of Weinberg's motions are granted following the argument tomorrow, it will result in dropping the case against Coblentz, for the time at least.

Russian Ship Late at Norfolk Because of New York's Lure

Norfolk, Va., May 28 (Spl.).—Two days late because her crew wanted to see more of New York, the Russian motorship Stariy Bolshevik docked here today.

There are 33 in the crew and they appear a contented lot. They have accommodations equal to those of the skipper, Capt. M. Silutsky, and they eat at the same table with him and other officers.

The crew has its own bosses and a grievance committee. The skipper gives his orders—which are really suggestions—to the chairman of the committee, who in turn passes them along to the crew. If the suggestions are satisfactory they are put in effect, if not they are forgotten.

"But my crew is a happy lot," said Capt. Silutsky. "We have a guitar club and a domino club on board. Everybody likes everybody else and we have no trouble. We all share alike and that policy has worked wonders with my comrades on the ship."

The crew call one another "comrade." Several have heavy beards. The skipper speaks excellent English.

The vessel is discharging fertilizer material here and will be in port several days.

Norfolk Convicts Quickly Retaken

Norfolk, Va., May 28 (Spl.).—Charles Spring, sentenced to 18 years in the State penitentiary, and Moses Wallace, colored, given 25 years in connection with recent hold-up cases, enjoyed less than a half an hour of freedom today following a sensational break from the city jail.

They were in the mess hall at 7:30 a. m. Grabbing the keys from the hands of a deputy sergeant, they sprinted out of the hall before he could bring his gun into play.

Hurriedly letting themselves out, the men dashed down a street followed by pursuing police officers, trusties and others. Just as they reached a corner, Spring was brought down by a pursuer, but it remained for James Arthur Johnson, colored, to land Wallace. Wallace fought back but Johnson, who figured in the headlines about a year ago as the captor of Ed Johnson, colored assailant of a policeman's wife, hung on until the officers and others in the chase arrived.

Market Pact Plan Of Potato Growers

Norfolk, Va., May 28 (AP).—A hundred or more potato growers, shippers and representatives of cooperative organizations of eastern Carolina and Tidewater Virginia today indicated willingness to join in a marketing agreement of early Irish potatoes from the Southeastern States in an effort to stabilize prices and prevent surpluses being dumped on the market.

A. E. Merckel, representing the interstate early potato committee, which has been working several years to stabilize the crop and marketing conditions, was a chief proponent of the agreement. Other officials present were D. M. Dent, of the consumers council, NRA; H. M. Cleavey, a crop expert of the Department, and R. C. Butner, marketing specialist.

Army Verdict Delayed In Capt. Pride's Death

Junction City, Kans., May 28 (AP).—Army authorities at Fort Riley today delayed until tomorrow the announcement of the outcome of an investigation into the death of Capt. W. F. Pride, 42, former resident of Auburn, Me., at the post Saturday.

The officer's body was found in his quarters seated in a chair which had been badly burned. A davenport in the room also was burned.

Four Corners Man Gives Up In Knifing Case

Denies Slashing Arlington Man and Robbing Him; Posts Bail.

Edward B. Reed, of Four Corners, Md., charged with assault with intent to kill, gave himself up yesterday at the Silver Spring (Md.), police substation on a warrant issued after Frank Kolar, Arlington County, Va., real estate man, had been found with his throat slashed in his car on the old Bladensburg road near Four Corners, May 24.

He was released by Justice David Mears on $1,000 bond for appearance in Montgomery County Police Court, Rockville, Md., June 18. He told Sergt. Guy L. Jones and Policeman Ralph Howard, in charge of investigation, he answered the warrant as soon as he heard of its issuance.

Police said Kolar and a chance drinking acquaintance, whom he identified as Joseph C. Davis, of the 700 block of Sixth street northwest, who is being held by police as a State witness, went to a barbecue stand at Four Corners, where they met Reed, Robert S. Copeland, of the 900 block of Longfellow street northwest, and Mr. and Mrs. John S. Schaeffer, of Four Corners. They afterward went to the Schaeffer home, where accounts of what transpired differ.

Kolar told police he was struck on the head, slashed with a knife and robbed of $200. Reed claimed to have been chased into the yard after a quarrel with the Schaeffers. Copeland, according to police, was cut on the wrist by Reed. Reed said the accidental cutting occurred when he was being pushed about the yard.

The Schaeffers said they and Reed took Copeland to Walter Reed Hospital, leaving Kolar and his companion in the yard. The Schaeffers, Reed and Copeland have denied that Davis was the man with Kolar.

Harrisonburg Man 3d to Die in Crash

R.O. Sterling, Meat Dealer, to Be Buried Today.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 28 (Spl.).—Robert O. Sterling, 35, wholesale butcher of Harrisonburg, died at Rockingham Memorial Hospital today from injuries suffered yesterday when his automobile crashed into a stone wall on the highway near Newport, Page County.

Clarence Humphrey, 25, of Harrisonburg, the driver, died a few hours after the accident. Gilbert Lucas, of Shenandoah, was killed instantly. Sterling and Humphrey were returning to Harrisonburg and Lucas was picked up to be taken to Shenandoah. The three had attended a dance near Luray.

Sterling is survived by his wife and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles O. Sterling. Funeral services will be held at the Presbyterian Church tomorrow. Humphrey was buried today in Woodbine. Services for Lucas were held at Shenandoah Sunday.

Stolen Checkbook Used by Forger To Swindle Bank

Cumberland, Md., May 28 (Spl.).—Intensive effort is being made to apprehend a forger who swindled a Cumberland bank of $1,030 today. The law offices of former Mayor George Henderson and Elmer J. Carter, referee in bankruptcy, were robbed Saturday morning of bank and check books. With Carter's checkbook the man took several checks, amounting to nearly $4,000, made payable to Carter. He deposited the checks to Carter's credit and then presented a "cash" check for $1,030, saying Carter wanted the money.

The man rushed into the bank, hatless and coatless, as if sent hurriedly from Carter's office.

Bagby Rail Head, Fighting for Life

Baltimore, May 28 (Spl.).—George P. Bagby, president of the Western Maryland Railroad, was reported critically ill at Union Memorial Hospital here today. Four Baltimore physicians have been called into consultation.

Mr. Bagby underwent a stomach operation April 14 and has remained in the hospital since. Today his physician, Dr. Walter Baetjer, and Dr. William A. Fisher, a surgeon, were reported to have called two other prominent doctors.

Mr. Bagby became president of the Western Maryland after Maxwell Byers, the former president, had been shot to death by Dudley G. Gray, a vice president, on October 10, 1930. He had been general solicitor and vice president in charge of operation and head of the legal department since 1917.

Pastor Addresses Graduating Class

Bristol, Va., May 28 (Spl.).—The Rev. Dr. R. F. Campbell, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, of Asheville, N. C., delivered the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class of King College last evening, at the First Presbyterian Church here. Dr. Campbell is a member of the college board of trustees.

The senior oratorical contest was held tonight.

Final exercises will be held in the college chapel at 8 p. m. tomorrow, preceded by the annual alumni banquet in the college dining hall at 6 p. m. W. L. Frierson, prominent Chattanooga, Tenn., attorney, will deliver the commencement address, preceding the awarding of degrees to 25 seniors.

Iowa U. to Oust Trio For Cheating on Tests

Iowa City, Iowa, May 28 (AP).—Drastic punishment will be meted out to three University of Iowa students reported to have confessed participation in the theft and sale of final examination questions, members of the discipline committee indicated today.

The three youths will be expelled when the committee acts Tuesday, and scores of students who used the questions to prepare for tests also may be punished, members of the committee said.

"New Deal' Poll Jeered by Britten

Calls Test of Popularity "Damn Clever" Politics.

Representative Fred Britten (Republican), Illinois, yesterday characterized the Literary Digest's poll on the popularity of the New Deal as a "damn clever piece of politics."

Britten's statement was made on the floor of the House during a speech against the NRA.

"This poll was deliberately planned for the purpose of building up the Democratic party. It was studied for weeks and months before it was launched. Tons of handsome literature featuring the picture of a handsome President is being sent out," Britten said.

"This would make a horse laugh," he concluded. "I wish they would pull a stunt like that for me in my campaign in Illinois next fall."

Doctor on Convention Slate.

A Washington osteopathic physician, Dr. D. C. D. Swope, will have a place in the house of delegates of the American Osteopathic Association when that organization holds its annual convention in Wichita, Kansas, the week of June 23.

Maxie Given Post To Place Veterans

Richmond, May 28 (Spl.).—Appointment of Raymond E. Maxie, of Richmond, disbursing officer for the Veterans' Administration, as veterans' placement representative for Virginia, was announced today by Frank A. Cavedo, State director of the National Reemployment Service.

Maxie's duties begin on June 1. He succeeds Mr. Cavedo, who, on April 1, became head of the reemployment service when George W. Guy resigned.

As veterans' placement representative, Maxie will see that the veterans of Virginia are given legal preference on Federal jobs.

Scared Bandit Drops $4,500 Pay Roll Loot

Chicago, May 28 (AP).—His own fright snatched success from a bandit who seized the $4,500 pay roll for porters at Marshall Field's department store today.

Apparently frightened by crowds of shoppers as he emerged from a sub-basement, the bandit dropped the cash and sprinted through the crowd into the street. A customer restored the money to the company.

Woman's Tip Holds Man for Murder

Probe Reopened in Death Three Years Ago.

Morgantown, W. Va., May 28 (Spl.).—Under a murder charge preferred by officers on information given by a young woman of McMechen, who told officers her conscience troubled her after keeping silent three years, Jimmy Jack, 38, a miner and former railroad section boss of Maidsville, has been arrested and held for grand jury action under bond.

Jack is accused of slaying Mike Kaluka, miner, May 2, 1931, in a fight at Maidsville, according to Miss Betty May Matheny Schoolcraft, first reported as Betty McPheeney, who was taken into custody after making her statement at McMechen and brought here for a reopening of the case.

In the original investigation the coroner decided Kaluka was a victim of a hit-and-run motorist. Jack denies all knowledge of the alleged crime.

an advertisement on wheels

HERE is a delivery car built to stand up, to require the minimum of service—yet capable of performance few commercial vehicles (even at high prices) have ever delivered before.

Its new Ford V-8 engine gives it a "pick-up" and top speed that cut delivery time and enable the car to cover more ground. You'll find this particularly important on long trips or in difficult traffic conditions.

You will find, also, that in spite of its extra carrying space and power, this is the most economical commercial car Ford has ever built. That includes lower gas consumption and lower maintenance costs.

Look at these new Ford Delivery Cars yourself. Notice their many mechanical improvements, their unusually smart appearance and the newly designed cushion for driver comfort. A new Ford V-8 means not only decidedly lower delivery costs—it means a powerfully attractive daily advertisement for your business.

Magnificent Failure.

The fifth successful transatlantic flight from east to west, and the second successful flight from Paris to New York without a stop, is now a matter of history. Ocean flights, in whatever direction, no longer attract the attention they did at the time of Lindbergh's epochal dash in 1927, and it is doubtful if any future accomplishment by a flier will so set the world on fire with admiration.

The daring dash of yesterday by Maurice Rossi and Paul Codos was only a partial triumph for the two Frenchmen and their plane. Experienced fliers, however, they undoubtedly learned much that will help future aviators in the continuing struggle to establish transatlantic airlines. Their names will rank in aviation's history with Coste and Bellonte, who also flew from Paris to New York, the only ones who previously have soared from one city in the Old World to another in the New without mishap. Before them Kingford Smith showed the way to Newfoundland, and the famed Bremen fliers did the almost impossible in their hop from Ireland to the wastes of Labrador's Greenley Island. Capt. Mollison has twice flown to this country, but not from the continent of Europe, and once he ingloriously cracked up at that joke town of the vaudevillians, Bridgeport, Conn. Each, in his way, has written important chapters of aviation, and some day perhaps the east to west flight, so much more difficult than the other way, may become relatively commonplace.

And so, if Rossi and Codos failed of their Pacific Coast objective, and thus lost the $60,000 prize for which they were striving, they can find glory enough in doing what only two others, and these their compatriots, have done before. They are assured of remembrance by posterity. Whether such achievement will be a great benefit to mankind is one of the problems we leave to that same posterity to argue about. We are content with hailing Rossi and Codos for the success of their magnificent failure.

Default Impending?

Since it was a foregone conclusion that Great Britain would either make a token payment on war debt account or else pay nothing at all, passage of the Johnson act was virtually equivalent to inviting a default. Apparently the prospect of being branded as a defaulter no longer creates the dismay among the British which it would once have excited. If the President were prepared to give them any assurance that token payments would absolve them from the stigma of being officially banned as defaulters, however, another payment would no doubt be forthcoming. As it is, the effect of the Johnson act has been to bring the debt controversy to a head in a way that creates a great deal of ill-feeling, and produces no funds.

It is most unfortunate that a debtor government should be treated as a moral delinquent, especially when that government has indicated that it recognizes the validity of the contract. The fundamental problems involved in the war debts will never be settled by an exchange of harsh language or political maneuvers. They will have to be viewed objectively and the negotiators must be prepared to speak a common language of understanding.

The case for debt revision rests upon general arguments emphasizing the disturbing effects upon world trade of transfers of large sums representing no new economic values. Such payments place a strain upon the exchanges and obstruct the flow of goods. Moral rights and wrongs have little to do with the case for revision and when they are considered, it turns out that all parties feel aggrieved. Until debtors and creditors are prepared to take a realistic attitude on these thorny issues, no progress toward a workable settlement is to be expected.

A Narrow Escape.

The would-be assassins of Ambassador Caffery probably thought they were serving their country by trying to rid Cuba of the representative of a hated foreign power. It is difficult to understand the perverted mental processes of the men who would destroy the individuals symbolical of the institutions that they really want to annihilate. In this particular case, it is not hard to envisage the unhappy results that might have followed a fatal assault upon our Ambassador. The Cuban army chief of staff expressed deep concern not only because of the attack, but "because of the fatal consequences which it might have meant to us."

Had the attack upon the Ambassador been successful, it would have been interpreted by many Americans as indication that a conciliatory policy invites attack. Vociferous demands for reprisals might have followed. The result might have been the undoing of all the work of the negotiators who have labored long and patiently to find a solution of Cuba's political and economic difficulties without forced intervention in her domestic affairs.

Economic conditions in the island are reported to be steadily improving. With political stability established, further progress may be confidently anticipated. All these gains, actual and prospective, might have been dissipated by a single well-aimed bullet. Assassins are not always the impotent destroyer that they are sometimes pictured as being. They are often a powerful agent of destruction, hitting the institutions they want to save and creating the ruin that they fancied they were averting.

The Disarmament Conference.

It is obviously a general opinion that the Disarmament Conference, meeting in full session today after a long and disintegrating interval, has been called together merely to hear its requiem. On the eve of the gathering the difficulties which it confronts seem almost insurmountable, while it is clear that the forces working for dissolution are stronger than ever. A biting commentary on the ability of man to handle his social order is provided by the fact that, in a world where nine people out of ten are appalled at the prospects of another world war, the means to make that will for peace effective are so incompetent.

That which promises most for some measure of success from the current deliberations is precisely the widespread realization of what collapse of the conference would really mean. Probably in every country there is a small minority which would really like to see this outcome, believing in some muddled fashion that it is in the interests of their particular nation to turn its back on the hope of peace through international agreement. In every country, also, there is certainly a vast number of well-intentioned citizens who have been utterly wearied by the protracted negotiations, who have no interest in the political rivalries of other countries, and who feel that if there can be no agreement, that fact might as well be recognized. Everywhere, however, can be found members of a third group, whose thinking has led them to see this conference in perspective. It is the attitude of this group, even though in some countries they can not be vocal, which has so far held the conference together, in spite of all discouragements.

For to those who have followed the international effort directed continuously since Armistice Day of 1918 toward this conference, its collapse could have but one interpretation. It would mean an end to the effort to prevent war by the collective action of civilized nations, and a return to the international anarchy which prevailed before 1914 and which led inevitably to the disaster of that year. It would mean also more than a step backward. It would mean a change of direction toward a goal labeled not world peace, but renewed world war.

As science and invention have today shrunk and knit together this little globe, there no longer remains an alternative between increasing national cooperation or increasing national friction. Either political progress must keep pace with the march of civilization, or civilization must turn back to the level at which political science is held fettered. To most who think at all on these matters the absence of balance between the world of cables, radio and airplanes, and the world of an eighteenth century political nationalism is apparent. And it is the fear of making this lack of balance even more pronounced which tends to hold the envoys at Geneva together, even though their difficulty in achieving anything concrete against the forces of disruption has become so clear.

Admiral Togo.

Twenty years after Appomattox, Ulysses S. Grant sat dying of cancer of the throat at Mount McGregor. Today, Heihachiro Togo is reported as dying of the same disease near Chiyoda, just 29 years after his tremendous naval victory in the Sea of Japan.

Gen. Grant, looking out upon the Saratoga landscape, could see the Nation firmly at peace, a Nation he had helped to save from disruption. Admiral Togo, now nearing 90, surveys a stormier political scene. And where Grant, in his invalid's chair, could dream of the end of all wars, Togo, according to cables from Japan, thinks it well to remind his visitors that "we must not relax our vigilance."

The destruction of the Russian fleet by Admiral Togo in Tsushima Strait was the confirmation of Japan's future as a great naval nation. By all students of sea power he is regarded as a genius of marine strategy, who did much to change the destiny of his country. Whether that change has brought greater happiness to his countrymen is not Togo's concern. He has played his part in history. He looks across the rose garden which he planted as a youth and it is obvious that his thoughts roam backwards—not ahead.

Pride And Prejudice.

Americans never tire of making lists.

What the psychological explanation is we do not attempt to say, further than to suggest that, when it comes to books at least, it is our prides and our prejudices which cause us to make up such compilations, and argue over them. The latest list to be given publicity is one in which 72 book titles are mentioned. They are the choices recommended for college-student reading by the heads of 33 departments of English literature.

Of these, 29 suggested Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice," thus making it the one book that nearly all undergraduates are urged to read. Knowing the average student's not illogical dread of "recommended reading," this choice indicates that it is one of the least widely-read books in America.

Some of the most interesting things about this list are: Only four living authors are mentioned: Edith Wharton, James M. Barrie, Hamlin Garland and Willa Cather. Fourteen professors think their students ought to read Bulwer-Lytton's "Last Days of Pompeii." The "Autobiography of Benvenuto Cellini" is the only translation on the list. Besides Miss Cather and Mrs. Wharton, Mark Twain, Emerson, Henry Adams and Hamlin Garland are the only Americans recommended. The "Education of Henry Adams" and "The Little Minister" received the same number of votes—thirteen. Fifty-three of the books were novels, eight biographies, six dramas and five essays. Hardy, Thackeray, Meredith, Hawthorne, George Eliot, Arnold Bennett, Dickens and Lytton Strachey are the most-recommended authors.

We could continue mixing this all up, but what sensible conclusion we could reach at the expense of more space is dubious. Perhaps it would be that the brain trust has drained all radicalism out of the universities. On the entire list there is no book more provocative of revolutionary thought than "Walden;" or "Justice," by John Galsworthy. We call the complete list to the attention of M. Lincoln Schuster, who recently charged that college graduates do not read. Perhaps he can find the clew to their apathy here.

A Forgotten Monetary Goal.

The United States Bureau of Labor Statistics reports a slight recession in the average level of wholesale commodity prices for the week ended May 19. The index is now about 10 per cent above the level of the corresponding week last year, but it is still 26.5 per cent below that of the magic year 1926, which is (or was), the declared objective of the Administration's price-raising policies.

Although there has been a small advance in prices since the beginning of the year, the general index has remained practically stationary since February. In fact it is now slightly below the level achieved three months back. Moreover, the spread between the prices of farm products and manufactured commodities shows no sign of narrowing, but appears to be increasing slightly. Thus the average prices of farm products in the middle of May was below the level attained last July, while prices of building materials, household furnishing goods, and metals and metal products have been advancing quite steadily, if slowly, since then.

Rising prices for manufactured articles and industrial raw materials are to be expected under code agreements which raise wages, increase overhead costs, and permit price fixing. Inevitably such price advances tend to neutralize efforts to increase the purchasing power of farmers in relation to other producing classes. The failure of monetary manipulation, combined with production control under the AAA and the recovery program, to achieve the announced price adjustments is not in the least surprising. It is, however, amazing that confronted with this evidence of futility the Administration should proceed along discredited experimental lines, embarking upon a silver-buying program, without restating or redefining its purpose in an intelligible manner.

Meanwhile, efforts to shorten working hours without reductions in wage rates threaten to increase industrial production costs still more, making that balanced price goal of 1926 seem infinitely remote. It is about time for the country to begin to demand information as to the goal of present policy. Is that 1926 price structure which was the foundation of the whole recovery program, agricultural and industrial, already discarded? And if so, what is the purpose of that continuing monetary experimentation which creates uneasy doubts about the future stability of the dollar?

An Old Custom Goes.

That perplexing Iowa custom of "spiking" near-beer with alcohol (alky, to you) is going to be discouraged now that prohibition has departed. This by official decree of no less a person than the chairman of the State Liquor Commission. He has issued warning that no longer may the tallcorn growers toss off the delectable (?) brew on which they seem to have thrived these many years. It is fervently hoped that the cessation of this custom will not be too great a shock on the collective system of Iowans.

In order to make his ruling effective, knowing his Iowa, the chairman has ruled that grain alcohol as such may be sold only to hospitals, doctors "and others using it professionally." (In Maine alcohol for a long time was legally available only to physicians "and for use in the arts.") Depriving Iowa of its incredible tipple of near-beer plus alcohol will perhaps work hardship on those sons of the soil, but after years of the practice they ought to be sufficiently hardened to stand even the legal beverages.

All of which reminds us somehow of a hardy Easterner who visited Iowa in the good old days before repeal—before Julian Street and others tried to make America wine-conscious and wean its citizens from the prohibition concoctions. He came back with tales of the beer-splits he had been offered everywhere out there and, in good American fashion, was boasting of their potability. He ceased his boasting, however, when he attended a party at Little Neck. There the effete New Yorkers were drinking straight alcohol. You could have beer for a chaser—if you wanted it, you weakling.

A Parade of the Past From the Files of The Post.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY.

PRESIDENT WILSON emphatically rejected a suggestion from manufacturers of the Middle West that the Administration's antitrust legislative program be reduced. He insisted that there was no material condition or substantial reason why the business of the country should not be in the most prosperous and expanding condition.

TEN YEARS AGO TODAY.

THE ARSENAL and ammunition dumps on the outskirts of Bucharest were destroyed by a series of terrific explosions which caused great loss of life and property damage and imperiled the royal palace at Cotroceni.

THE SENATE by a vote of 31 to 24 retained the committee's recommendation of a lump sum of $14,000,000 as the Federal Government's share, or in lieu thereof a 60-40 ratio, in regard to the District appropriation bill.

Bases Loaded.

Letters to the Editor

Interest-Controlled Fascism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: June is commonly regarded as the season for the assembling of the big racketeering organizations euphemistically called political conventions.

I am hereby offering a valuable suggestion for the guidance of these bodies in the future. It is in part that the Republicans, for their 1936 affair, choose as the place for meeting, the zero milestone in Potomac Park, just south of the White House. In view of their record for the past two decades, the zero setting is particularly fitting, and this in spite of their pyrrhic victory in Pennsylvania, the nomination of Senator Reed over Gov. Pinchot.

I am offering the advice two years in advance in order that the Republicans may appropriate the zero site (they have had a long career in "appropriating") before the competition becomes too keen. For it is clear that, with the increasing evidence of the failure of the NRA to remedy appreciably our distressful economic conditions, that the Democrats will be contenders for the position by 1936.

Here is a prediction: Fascism vs. a socialized commonwealth will be the real issue by that time. The reactionary elements of both the old have-been parties will unite in the effort to bolster up a wrecked capitalistic system, through a sort of fascism under the control of the "interests," and they may succeed in staving off for a time the triumph of social justice, but victory is coming with a "government of the people, by the people and for the people." The Lowly Cigarette.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is peculiar of the average American that he figures he is not vitally concerned in matters of Federal taxation unless he is one of the few millions who must pay an income tax. Never was there greater fallacy.

Let us consider the matter of the lowly cigarette. I mention it here because the Ways and Means Committee of the House is considering a bill to reduce by 40 per cent all tobacco taxes. Every time you buy a pack of cigarettes, you pay the Government 6 cents in tax. This means you are paying a tax of from 40 per cent on 15-cent cigarettes to 60 per cent on 10-cent cigarettes. Let me set forth the facts in another way. The average tobacco grower receives about $100 for the tobacco raised on one acre of ground. The manufacturer gets $300 for this same acre of tobacco, and the Federal Government gets $800 in taxes from it.

Don't think the income tax payer is the only goat in this orgy of Federal spending. He furnishes only a minor part of the money needed. The major part comes from all Americans by indirect taxation, like the 6-cent tax you pay on every pack of cigarettes you buy. These conditions will not be corrected until the people put the Republican party back in power, and it behooves every Republican to buckle on the armour of eternal truth and fight and fight to win. We now have the new deal, but what is needed is a square deal for the common people and the working man and woman. DR. G. M. FISHER.

Willis J. Abbot.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your tribute to Willis J. Abbot in The Post of May 21, brought to me information of his passing. It was my good fortune to have made his acquaintance about 1890, at which time he was a part of the editorial page of your paper. Association with Mr. Abbot was educational and otherwise beneficial to any man. I concur in all you say about him.

Academicians and Outlaws.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your newspaper quotes Sheriff Alcorn as saying when he sighted Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker: "That's them, boys!" And Sheriff Hamer is quoted: "If it wouldn't have been her, it would have been us."

Now, if the bright college graduates of the Bureau of Investigation of which we hear so much had been on this job, we wouldn't have had any such clumsy grammar inflicted on us. These Texas rangers have no sense of the esthetic.

Chief Hoover's academicians, if they went after Clyde and Bonnie like they did after Dillinger at Little Bohemia, would probably have stopped these two killers by waving their diplomas and fraternity pins at them and warning them that they represented the U. S. Government; in fact were "D. J. men," which is supposed to throw terror into the hearts of outlaws.

The next time Dillinger is captured, which will probably be by some small town constable who don't know the difference between a fraternity pin and a coupling pin, he should be forced to take a college course, so when he is paroled again the handicaps will be equal. J. L. P.

Bouquets for Miss Smith.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I should like in this way to express my interest in the brief poems by Katherine Smith which have appeared in your Women's Section over an extended period of time. It has been entertaining to read these verses on a variety of subjects from time to time, and I note with regret that they have been discontinued of late. Inasmuch as the poems were in the Sunday edition, as usual, I hope the omission in your daily paper is only temporary. DORA L. HUGHES.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I've enjoyed the little verses by Katherine Smith on the woman's page. Lately I haven't seen them. I would enjoy having them in the daily as well as the Sunday paper.

Personal Privilege.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is the customary portion of editorial truth in your "Solution Deferred;" yet there is also at least one dash of salty error. You say that the authors of the "muck-raking novels" proposed "no fundamental remedy for the evils written about."

I never read but one of the books cited in evidence, and that one—my own "House of Bondage"—I never read after it outgrew its page-proofs. Now I am afraid to read it. Nevertheless, my recollection is that it did indeed offer what its writer at least then believed to be a "fundamental remedy for the evils" it tried to depict: It offered Socialism.

So much I submit in defense of my sincerity, not of my correctness. I have long since ceased to be a Socialist; I have not, alas, ceased writing!

A 50-50 Basis.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anent the silver question, permit me to take issue in regard to Ralph West Robey's article in your issue of May 19 and begin by repeating a story I heard. Just at the close of the Civil War a Confederate ship was proceeding up the Mississippi River. They had plenty of Confederate money, but were short on fuel. Seeing some cord wood on shore and thinking they could trade, they pulled to shore. Locating the owner, they asked him how he would trade some wood for Confederate money and he replied; "cord for cord."

Our paper money today is commercially worth the same plus the amount to convert it to paper, and printing a $1 bill or a $1,000 bill isn't worth anything to anybody except as a medium of exchange and stamped by our Government as such. But anything is worth the amount it takes to produce or obtain it. If it cost $1.29 to produce 1 ounce of silver, it would be worth that much if the silver in a silver dollar is worth 50 cents. The Government stamp on it makes it worth the other 50 cents as a medium of exchange. The gold standard signifies the gold in gold currency is worth the same in bullion as if stamped. All paper certificates are backed by gold or silver in the Treasury as specified.

Personally I think the idea of coining all newly mined silver on the 50-50 basis is as far as they should go with silver at this time.

As Others See It

Incongruous Jobs.

The growing resentment at the practice of Federal officials serving as chairmen of political committees is manifest in Pennsylvania, where Warren R. Van Dyke is both the Collector of the Port and chairman of the Democratic State Committee. Pointing out that this committee has sent out from time to time letters for contributions from officeholders and others, the Philadelphia Inquirer says: "Mr. Van Dyke may be personally blameless so far as the violation of the law is concerned, but his name appears on the letterheads of the State committee whence the appeal emanated." Our contemporary adds:

It is rumored that Collector Van Dyke contemplates resigning his Federal job in order to devote all of his time and attention to the work of the State Committee. That is something he must decide for himself, but as a matter of good taste and in the interest of fair play he should resign one job or the other.

The situation in this State, in which Mr. J. Enos Ray serves as Collector of Internal Revenue and chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, is worse. Mr. Ray is a tax collector, and it is obvious that one acting in such capacity should not be interested in either the management of a political campaign or in the collection, directly on indirectly, of campaign funds. The fact that his predecessor, Mr. Galen L. Tait, carried on in both capacities for twelve years, does not improve things at all.

Entirely aside from the incongruity of Mr. Ray's dual activities, he is either a figure-head in his political job or gives to it attention that ought to be devoted to his official duties. In the one case he is no good to the Democratic party except on the theory that, as head of its State committee, his official position carries influence. On the other hand, if the work of the chairmanship involves time and labor, he would be better employed in giving the Government its just dues for the very liberal pay he receives.

The Post Impressionist

Vacation Time!

Postoffice, Tuesday.

There are still some places that are like some people. Having known them ever so little, you are sure to miss them, when absent, with a quite personal sense of loss, no matter how pleasant may be the substitute at hand. And so, last night, when The Post-Impressionist, abed in Washington, was wakened by the hum of an airplane, by the flash through his window of an airways searchlight, he was wakened to a bitter-sweet nostalgia for the gulls crying over certain Northern waters, for the winking beacons of Seguin and Half-Way and Cape Elizabeth, for a little bit of coast we know—and have known long—in Maine.

We wondered if the stars were shining on those 365 islands of Casco Bay, Explorer Peary's, Poet Edna St. Vincent Millay's and the rest—one for every day in the year—whether a splendid storm was blowing, or whether there brooded above hillside and sea a regal calm. We wondered if the never silent tide was draining the inlet or whipping at the dock. And we wanted poignantly to beat the dawn to the top of the little mountain, to climb the skeleton tower that the geodetic surveyors built there, and to watch the rising sun pick out Portland, then Franconia Notch and then the white peak of the master of the range.

These are the days—and, oh, but these are the nights!—when the "city pent" begin to dream of the country.

Our waking dream went all around the 12-months clock, up there . . .

With Autumn, the rains come, but not until you've had your fill of lobsters, ten minutes between the sea and your stove—not until the hardwood of the forest is a glory of crimson—not until hundreds of quarts of blueberries have dried on their bushes because there are too many for anybody to pick.

And, if the rains do come, you don't care. For the ducks come also, the pheasants and the partridges—and the wild geese, not always flying too high. You welcome the Autumn with a scarlet cap or a red handkerchief around your neck, so that no hunter will mistake you for the game which you do a good deal resemble in your heart of hearts.

Winter?

What of it?

The day is here when the people of all our North are beginning rapturously to realize what sports winter sports really are. The thermometer falls as low in Maine as in the Alps, but the snow rises as high, and there are as many hours of sunshine. There are such things as skiis and snowshoes and sleds for snow, such things as skates for ice.

The woods, meanwhile, are thick with deer, of which any huntsman may, if he has the skill, the license and the heart, shoot his one animal per season. There are legions of rabbits to be caught, notwithstanding that they are guaranteed to turn white, for camouflage purposes, with the first flake out of the sky—and to remain white if you don't catch them) until the first thunderstorm of spring . . .

Spring . . .

With an offshore wind behind it, the fishing fleet goes scudding out, over waters blue and white, for the cod; over waters almost black, for the haddock. The fly-fishing starts in the streams ashore, and the trout are leaping, silver-lightning-like, in Cushman Pond.

Spring? Why, man, it'll be summer now before you've had time to gather half the May-flowers in front of your shack! . . .

Summer . . .

They say Bill Bartlett, somer's over the hill, has a saddle horse or two—if you can ever get hold of Bill. You can row out to rough Wallace's Head, approaching it through the long backwater. You can have a "whole bathing place" to yourself at Spring Beach.

There are waves and to spare for surfboards—if you're young enough. And, if you aren't, and if the trout didn't spoil you for a quieter sport, can't you catch cunners by merely sitting still on Cunner Rock? Mose Wallace may be prevailed upon to take the deep-sea fishing—Mose or "The Pilot."

And, if you don't want to do anything—oh, this is the crown of it all!—there isn't anybody around to be any the wiser when you do just exactly nothing.

And you never put on a dress shirt.

And you don't wear either woollen plus-fours or flannels.

And you don't wear those uncomfortable compromises that amateur campers call "shorts."

You just throw on a pair of ragged overalls.

And you let it go at that! . . .

Around the dial of the year? It was only for a moment!

The hum of the airplane had faded into the crash of street-cars. The searchlight was swinging away from us: no Seguin, Half-Way or Cape Elizabeth beacon. What could it have been that we mistook for gulls?

A city clock struck 2 heavily. It struck 2 a. m. . . .

But some places are like some people: Once you have known them, you will be sure to miss them, when absent, with a quite personal sense of loss, no matter how essentially pleasant may be the substitute at hand.

With Carlisle Bargeron

Oh, Here Comes the AAA.

ASSUMING that Mr. Roosevelt knows what is in the little clarification bill that the Agricultural Administration wants, he has apparently decided to take us in for a slight splurge of Socialism as the next entertainment on the program. Maybe it is what is meant by a well-rounded-out plan. The NRA, having given us a taste of Fascism, is now trying in some degree, at least, to get out from under what it has set up.

BARGERON.

Anyway, if the AAA gets the authority it seeks, it will take the stage and hold it until Congress comes back. It is such a surprise, too, because they had given us the impression over there at the AAA that they were a most retiring and modest crowd. For the past year they have confined themselves mostly to abhorring, while the NRA did the cutting up. Now they are prepared to step out and do some performing themselves.

* * * *

And it won't be that any transformation has come over them. The impression they have given of shyness was never real. The only thing in the world that has held them in check has been their lack of authority. With an appearance of bashfulness they are now seeking that authority in the clarification bill. What they really mean by clarification is that Messrs. Wallace, Tugwell and Jerome Frank, particularly the latter two, want to try their hands at running the packers and the millers.

They have wanted to do this ever since they came in. Jerome Frank has wanted to ever since he got a complex against the packers out in Chicago. Their attitude was the cause for the blow-up centering around George Peek several months ago. Peek went to the Export-Import Bank and most of the food codes went over to the more conservative administration of the NRA. The incident served to reveal that the AAA had not been able, because of the philosophy of Messrs. Wallace, Tugwell and Frank, to sign up any codes. The jurisdiction of the packers and millers was left to them, however, presumably in the hope that in some way or somehow they would be able to try out their experiment.

They haven't been able to do it, simply because the millers and packers have refused to accept the kind of codes the trio wants to apply. The little clarification, which they are so blushingly seeking now, would empower them to apply these codes.

In view of this, it is rather amazing that any public official should describe it as simply a clarification bill.

* * * *

There may have been one recently, but at one time there was no secret about what the timid trio demanded of the packers and the millers. They demanded then, and they want now, authority to examine their books, to make changes in the interest of the "efficient" operation of their plants. It is not a great exaggeration, I think, to say that they want to run the plants—in the interest of the farmer, of course.

Maybe the packers are spending too much for promotion, maybe they have too many salesmen on the road, maybe their clerical force is entirely too large. More economical operation of the plants would make it possible to pay the farmer a higher price for his cattle.

Since the beginning of this march to a "more abundant life" there has been a serious conflict between the NRA and the AAA as to how it should be pursued. The AAA has held the NRA administration in contempt, contending that it permitted business to get by with murder. It made no effort to disguise that it was more exacting in its codes, in fact, that it told the business birds just where to head in. It is in the AAA that the so-called Young Liberals hold sway.

They have not been able to do any harm because they had no codes. They have been suffering from suppressed desires for a year. If the clarification bill, as they call it, goes through they will have their codes. In fact, it would seem to be logical that the food codes which were taken away be given back. And they are just itching to get the opportunity to administer them.

Farm Bureau Of Shenandoah Leads in Area

Organization Is Pioneer in Using Locally Grown Grain.

(The eighteenth of a series of stories on the cooperative farm organizations of Virginia.)

Woodstock, Va., May 28 (Spl.). The pioneer among the Farm Bureaus in using locally grown grain in mixing poultry and dairy feeds is the Shenandoah Cooperative Farm Bureau.

This progressinve farm bureau was the first to install a hammer mill to grind corn and barley produced by the members and install a mixing machine to mix these ground grain with protein concentrates to make a proper balanced ration for poultry and dairy cows. A hammer mill and feed mixer of one-half ton capacity were installed in the Farm Bureau's Woodstock warehouse in the fall of 1931. Another hammer mill and one-ton feed mixer was installed in the Mount Jackson warehouse of the cooperative in the spring of 1932. It was not until late 1932 that the Rockingham Cooperative Farm Bureau installed a feed mixer and it was the spring of 1934 when the Augusta Cooperative Farm Bureau installed this type of machinery.

To supplant the grinding and mixing service, the Farm Bureau in Shenandoah County has mounted an engine-driven corn sheller on the chassis of an old car. This corn sheller is moved from warehouse to warehouse as needed to shell the corn to grind for mixing in various feeds. It also is driven to the farms of the members and corn shelled at from 2 cents to 5 cents per bushel, depending upon the distance traveled from the nearest warehouse.

Organized in 1928.

The manager of the Shenandoah Cooperative Farm Bureau, C. W. Sollenberger, estimates that with this machinery the farm bureau is able to use all available grown grain as ingredients in making mixed feeds.

This enterprising farm bureau was organized early in 1928. It constructed a modern warehouse in Mount Jackson and started business on August 1, 1928. During the first year of operation it handled the purchasing of $78,000 worth of supplies for the 245 members. It was not long before the members in the vicinity of Woodstock began agitating for the establishment of a farm bureau warehouse at that point. The directors therefore rented a small building on a side street and opened for business in Woodstock on January 1, 1930. On June 1, 1931, the Woodstock branch was moved to a specially constructed warehouse on a railroad siding which was leased on favorable terms. By 1932 the membership had increased to 450 and the volume of business to $202,806.

The farm bureau membership in the territory around Strasburg gradually grew to the point that it was feasible to rent a large warehouse at that point, which was opened for business on March 1, 1932. This warehouse is used as a central warehouse for the farm bureau because it is conveniently located at a railroad junction point to which freight rates are materially lower than to the other points where the farm bureau has warehouses.

$200,000 Business.

From this point supplies are trucked to Mount Jackson and Woodstock, as well as to the farm bureaus operating at Winchester and Front Royal. As the result of efficient operation and satisfactory service, the volume of business has grown until this year it will be approximately $200,000, although prices are lower than they were in 1930. The membership also has been expanded to approximately 700.

The Shenandoah Cooperative Farm Bureau handled most of the lines of staple goods used by farmers. The principal commodities handled for the members are feed, grains, fertilizer, seed, binder twine, gasoline and motor oil for autos, trucks and tractors, as well as fencing, roofing and cement. For the convenience of its members, the farm bureau also purchases staple groceries and dry goods.

The first president of the Shenandoah Cooperative Farm Bureau was J. D. Golladay. In 1932, he was succeeded by Nehemiah Kelly. The present manager, C. W. Sollenberger, took charge of the business of the farm bureau, July 1, 1931, and has been successful in building up the business and membership since that time.

D. A. V. Elects Leu In West Virginia

Wheeling, W. Va., May 28 (Spl.). Activities of the West Virginia Department, Disabled American Veterans of the World War, will be directed by Dr. R. H. Leu, past commander of the American Legion post at New Martinsville, who was elected president at the twelfth annual convention just closed. He succeeds W. D. Arnold, of Huntington.

Other officers elected are Frank V. Lally, Wheeling, senior vice commander; J. E. White, Parkersburg, junior vice commander; H. C. Perrine, Wheeling, chief of staff; M. F. Blaney, Grafton, judge advocate and Rufus McCutcheon, Parkersburg, chaplain. Dr. Leu appointed Fay F. Baker, Clarksburg, sergeant at arms; Edward C. Werley, Buckhannon, service officer; Dr. C. E. Marshall, Parkersburg, rehabilitation officer, and Emery Drinko, Paden City, adjutant and treasurer.

Girl Is Sent to Jail For Using Sidewalk As Auto Speedway

Salisbury, Md., May 28 (Spl.).—Marie Lloyd, 21-year-old brunette who gave her residence as New Jersey, is the first woman convicted of a charge of drunken driving in the People's Court of Wicomico County.

It was alleged she piloted her car gracefully upon the sidewalk and off again and wended her serpentine way up one of the city's main thoroughfares, ending the wild ride by collision with a truck.

Not having the money to pay the $100 fine imposed by the court today, she elected to serve the alternative of 30 days in the county jail.

Both prosecutor and judge called attention to the fact that in the seven years since the court's creation this was the first conviction of a drunken driving charge involving a woman driver.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

THE GARBLE SISTERS.

"Well, I see that a posse got Clarence Darrow and his girl friend, Bonnie Scotland."

"You don't mean Clarence Darrow; you mean Clyde Barrow, don't you?"

"I guess so. Which made that report condemning the NRA? Was it Darrow or Barrow?"

"It was Clyde Barrow."

"Anyhow, the posse headed by Gen. Johnson ambushed him in Texas."

"I see where the Government is appropriating millions for a fight on crime in America."

"Yes. The President has been given power to stop all arms shipments to Chaco."

"Where's Chaco?"

"It's that place where Dillinger was last seen!"

* * * *

"Is Dillinger still at large? I thought they caught him in Turkey weeks ago."

"No; that was a fellow named Sam Istanbul."

"What did he do?"

"He violated the NRA codes by pressing pants for 20 cents instead of a quarter, or something. I forgot the exact details."

"Did he lose his Blue Eagle?"

"No. After Attorney General Cummings presented the case the grand jury threw it out on the ground there were no income tax evasions, as charged."

* * * *

"Why talk about crime all the time? Let's talk about the British amateur battle at Prestwick."

"Oh, the British will win. Bolivia isn't strong enough to beat her."

"I'm talking about the golf tournament."

"Oh, you mean that thing Wee Willie Dunlap, Jesse Fischer and Johnny Guilford played in against those British stars, Sir John Simon, Lady Astor and Noel Coward?"

"That's it. I was glad Jimmy McLarnin won. He's a swell golfer."

"Who did he ever beat?"

"Well, there was Big Bill Tilden, for one. And he won over Ellsworth Vines and Mata Hari at St. Cavalcade."

* * * *

"Baseball is my sport. Give me baseball and stars like Max Baer, Eli Yale and Bobby Jones."

"I saw Bobby Jones knock out three homers in one game once."

"They call him Babe Jones, not Bobby. The Yanks wouldn't be any good without him."

"Oh, I dunno. They've got Hack Wilson, Lou Foxx and Primo Terry."

"By the way, did you see the horse race the other day in which Equipoise won and was disqualified?"

"Sure. I never miss a Kentucky Derby!"

Stevedores Battle Police in Baltimore

Sergeant Beaten in Strike for Boost in Wages.

Baltimore, Md., May 28 (Spl.).—Striking stevedores battled police on the waterfront here today, five of them being arrested after a police sergeant had been struck over the head.

A flying squadron of 50 policemen, headed by an inspector, was sent to assist eight patrolmen already engaged in battling the stevedores. The police were forced to draw their pistols. During the clash Sergt. Emmanuel Sandler was struck.

The stevedores struck in protest over what they termed low wages. During the brisk battle with police representatives of the strikers were negotiating with the owners of two lumber barges for increased pay, and soon after the clash it was announced an agreement had been reached. The stevedores went back to work.

Where Ditch Threatens, Warning Is Needed

By Robert Quillen.

Some months ago, Government agents trapped a mail carrier who had been taking money from letters.

Last week they arrested an assistant postmaster who had taken money from the office.

The first man stole only a few dollars; the second less than a thousand. Yet both must live for years in cages, with no associates but the ignorant and depraved and vicious. They will never hear laughter or happy voices. They will never touch a woman's hand. And if they live to finish their sentences, the world will deny them another chance.

Neither man would have sold his liberty and his honor so cheaply if he had been given a choice.

They had jobs, friends, pleasures, reputation. Life was sweet to them.

Why did they throw it away? Why do many men—so many thousands of men—steal from their employers?

They don't think, or, rather, they think in a groove. Once the thought of stealing enters their minds, they are unable to get away from it. They think only of the act itself—never of the risk or the consequences. They are hypnotized.

And as the hypnotist's subject is awakened by a touch or word, so a word of warning might bring them back to sanity and a realization of the dreadful risk they are taking.

You have heard the story of the small boy, told not to leave the yard, who walked near the gate again and again and at last surrendered to temptation, only to be called back by his watchful mother.

"I saw you," said she, "every time you walked to the gate, and I knew you would disobey."

"But if you saw I was trying not to go out," wailed the poor culprit, "why didn't you tap on the window."

That is what tempted men need—a note in their mail, reading:

"Don't do it. The thief is caught, and prison is a dreadful place."

Why let a fellow man fall when one word of warning may keep him on his feet?

Chilton Enters West Virginia Senate Contest

Primary Will Find Heavy Field Seeking Offices Throughout State.

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 28 (Spl.). Political candidates continue to increase throughout West Virginia in preparation for the State primary election August 7.

William E. Chilton, sr., former United States Senator and Charleston newspaper publisher, has announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Senator. His entry makes the fourth in the race, the others being J. Alfred Taylor, Fayetteville newspaper editor and former speaker of the State House of Delegates; Graham Sale, Welch attorney, and Edmund Conaway, Marshall County educator.

Senator Howard F. Neale, of Parkersburg, has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for reelection from the Third State Senatorial district, comprising Wood, Wirt, Pleasants and Ritchie Counties. Dan B. Fleming, Democrat, of St. Marys, is the holdover.

Alvin J. Barnhart, of Charleston, former member of the House of Delegates from Kanawha County, has certified himself as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for State Senator from the Eighth district. He seeks the seat held by Senator Clyde Beecher Johnson, Democrat, of Charleston, whose term expires this year. The district, comprising Kanawha, Boone and Logan Counties, is also represented by Senator Luther B. Jones, Democrat, of Boone County.

New Officers Elected By Future Farmers

Orange, Va., May 28 (Spl.).—Officers for next year were elected at the May meeting of the Davidson Chapter of Future Farmers of America. Joe W. Carpenter, retiring president, conducted the final 1933-34 meeting.

New officers are Franklin Waugh, president; Harry Willoughby, vice president; Thomas Earl Lee, secretary; Neil Martin, treasuer; Wade Stephen, reporter.

Town Up 129 In Population

Fredericksburg Figure Is Now 7,610, Annual Report Reveals.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 28 (Spl.). Fredericksburg's population on December 31, 1933, was 7,610, figures in the annual report of City Manager L. J. Houston, jr., just issued in book form, reveal.

The Upper Ward, with 3,808, has a slight lead over the Lower Ward, with 3,802. Women outnumber men, 4,004 to 3,606. The increase over 1932 was 129.

The figures, collected in the twelfth annual census made by Sanitary Inspector R. E. Beckham, in his house-to-house inspection, show that the population of Fredericksburg has slowly increased every year since 1922, except when in 1927 the figure fell slightly.

There are 6,185 whites and 1,425 colored people in the town.

500 Attend Service At Walkersville

Walkersville, Md., May 28 (Spl.). About 500 persons attended the annual Memorial Day service in the Glade Cemetery yesterday under auspices of Glade Valley Council, Junior O. U. A. M.

A parade, headed by the Odd Fellows Band, Jr. O. U. A. M., Council Taneytown; Councils of Thurmont, Frederick and adjoining towns; Patriotic Sons of America, Woodsboro; Glade Valley Council, No. 112; children of local Sunday schools, and the Walkersville Band, moved over the principal streets to the cemetery. The exercises opened with singing, followed by scripture reading by the Rev. Fred R. Seibel, jr., pastor of the Lutheran Church, and prayer by the Rev. John W. Fisher, pastor of the United Brethren Church. Former State Councilor Edward S. Rice, Jefferson Council, presided, and the principal address was by Holden S. Felton, Frederick.

Miss Edna G. Smith, Woodsboro, gave a reading and the services closed with benediction by the Rev. T. W. Lloyd. The committee in charge was Murray S. Wachter, Mervin Green, Harry Morgan and Wilbert L. Smith.

"Queed."

One December day in the year 1911, when I was staying at that delightful boarding house in Munich, the Pension Nordland, which I still recommend to all Americans who go to Germany, I was suddenly taken ill with flu or something of the kind; and after a sleepless and feverish night, I wondered how I was going to live through the day. At a quarter of nine that morning some one brought me the new novel "Queed." I began to read it, forgot I was sick, read until I finished it at half-past four in the afternoon; then got up and walked outdoors, fully recovered. It was one of the happiest days in my year abroad.

The author of this delectable story was Henry Sydnor Harrison, the son of the famous head of the Brooklyn Latin School, Caskie Harrison.

Henry was born in 1880, in Sewannee, Tenn., was graduated from Columbia, became a newspaperman in Virginia and was on the editorial staff of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, becoming chief editorial writer in 1908. In 1911 his novel "Queed" made an immense success, being read with delight all over America. His next novel, "V. V.'s Eyes," enjoyed a good sale in spite of its unfortunate title.

Mr. Harrison was as clearly a casualty of the war as if he had been killed on the battlefield. In 1915 he joined the American Ambulance Service, and saw active duty in France, and his brother was killed in action in the Argonne. After these events, creative activity in his mind was destroyed, although he tried to write, and published two unsuccessful books. He died July 14, 1930, and is buried in Richmond.

I am certain that the novel "Queed" will delight readers now as it did when first published. The crisp and sparkling dialogue, the originality of the plot and construction, the whimsicality of the descriptions, the charm of the characters, the infectious humor, make it an irresistible book; though I will not guarantee that it will cure others as it did me.

But who can forget the pleasure dog?

8 Dead, 15 Hurt West Virginia's Week-End Toll

Rosedale Girl Is Killed in Automobile Crash. Man Jailed.

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 28 (Spl.). Accidents took 8 lives and injured 15 others in West Virginia over the week-end.

Miss Chloe McCumbers, 18, daughter of Benjamin McCumbers, of Rosedale, was killed last night when an automobile plunged over an embankment. William McElwees, 24, also of Rosedale, was in jail today at Glenville charged with driving the car while drunk, in connection with her death.

John E. Colebank, 73, Preston County farmer, was killed when crushed between two logs while cutting timber on his farm near Evansville.

Mrs. Letha Bassett, 30, of Moundsville, was killed by an automobile on a highway there.

S. H. Legge, 50, of Quinwood, assistant mine foreman, was killed and Tom Cavello, 45, Quinwood miner, was fatally injured when an auto plunged into a creek near Lookout.

Two school boys died and two men were injured when their skiff drifted into the stern wheel of a towboat in the Ohio River at Huntington. Monroe Jack Glancy, 14, was decapitated and Fred Lane, 13, was drowned. Jack Cutright, 34, and A. B. Copley, 34, were injured.

Morris E. Gilkinson, 42, Huntington engineer, died today at Beckley of injuries received in a head-on collision of Virginian Railway freight trains a week ago at Cirtsville.

Among those injured were Ralph Ellingwood, 38, Elkins farmer, whose body was mangled by a tractor, and Frank Decker, 46, of Elm Grove, who was in an automobile accident.

Hagerstown Girl Object of Search

Student, 16, Vanishes While Shopping With Mother.

Hagerstown, Md., May 28 (Spl.). An intensive search by State county and city authorities for Jane Hollar, 16, pretty junior high school student, who disappeared Saturday night while on a shopping tour with her mother, Mrs. Allen Hollar, thus far has been unsuccessful.

The girl, never away from her home at night, failed to rejoin her mother after shopping. Her parents are convinced she either was a victim of foul play or an amnesia victim. The girl, said her parents, is of a nervous temperament. Certain circumstances incident to the preparations she made to go shopping precluded any possibility she planned leaving, her mother said.

The girl, 5 feet 5 inches, weighing 130, was attired in white. She is a brunette.

Oak Grove Graduates Get Diplomas Tomorrow

Colonial Beach, Va., May 28 (Spl.). The Rev. C. P. Shelton, of St. Peters Episcopal Church, preached the baccalaureate sermon to the Senior Class of Oak Grove High School yesterday.

Dr. J. B. Hundley, of Essex, will make the commencement address at 8 p. m. Wednesday. Diplomas will be presented by Superintendent Blake T. Newton to James Latane, Edgar B. Reamy, Lula DeAtley, Kathryn Wilkins, and Lucille Thompson.

No End of Books

Theodore Hall

Knights, Teapots and Telepathy

ONE of these days I'm going to put some notepaper in this patient machine and tap out a few jocular but tart letters to the publishers. I shall accuse them, in polite terms, of course, of a certain deficiency in sense of humor.

Very plainly, in my mind's eye, I can imagine the ladies and gentlemen of the various publicity departments sitting down over their list of new books and their roster of reviewers. "Now what," they ask themselves in the course of the morning, "shall we send to Washington?"

THEO. HALL.

In each group, I deduce from the best of evidence, there is some one who leans forward to pound in this line of thought—Washington is the home-town of the New Deal; Washingtonians study politics and sociology as a gambler studies martingales; Washington is the place where every honest citizen goes to bed with a book of economics under his pillow. Then there are cries of "Hear! Hear!" around the table, and 17 cents pays the parcel post on a package which ought, for sheer dead weight, to be charged $22.

The combined result on this desk is something fearful and wonderful. My appetite for tomes of political panacea remains fairly healthy, but there are times, as now, when I'd really rather read of knights and teapots.

* * * *

Bertrand Du Guesclin was the first knight of France in the fourteenth century, the hero of the Hundred Years War, and the last exemplar of medieval chivalry. For all his glory, he was as ugly a man as the sun ever shone on. But he rose, by sheer pugnacity and courage, from his heritage as a petty Breton noble to the post of constable of France under Charles V, the Wise.

In Roger Vercel's historical novel, "Bertrand of Brittany" (Yale University Press, $3), you won't find the quaint prettiness of Croyn's "Fool of Venus." These were other times, and Bertrand was no soft-spoken troubadour. What you will find is the history of a grim and stoical fighter who made those qualities into a valid nobility. The siege and sack of cities, the intrique of court, the whole desperate struggle of France to push the English from her soil after the dread defeats of Crecy and Poitiers, these are the themes of the tale. Vercel, who gave us not long back that memorable little novel, "In Sight of Eden," marshals his complex material into a glowing story.

* * * *

Teapots and teaspoons, tankards and tureens, wine-coolers and Argyles (heat-preserving gravy-boats) and every other form of silver utensil used on a table make up the contents of C. C. Oman's "English Domestic Silver" (A. & C. Black, London, distributed by Macmillan, $2.50). It is a book connoisseurs and collectors will take to like a duck to water.

Oman, who is assistant keeper of metalwork (what amusing zoological overtones in that British phrase!) at the Victoria and Albert Museum, writes in his field with the informative authenticity which marks every volume in this excellent Library of English Art series. He covers the gold and silversmith's craft from earliest times, but pays particular attention to the production since 1660. Over 100 choice examples are illustrated.

But if you pride yourself on a candlestick bearing Queen Anne's arms, you'd best avoid this book. For no other work on the subject mentions the abuse of official plate. The royal arms usually meant no more than the ticket of the Royal Jewel House, which made plate for everyone from ambassadors to the speaker of the House of Commons.

* * * *

This column is not always corroborated in its judgments. "Finnley Wren," of which I thought highly, drew the words "febrile failure" from Times' reviewer.

But because I put all my counters on sending Dr. Alexander Cannon's "The Invisible Influence" to the literary limbo, the cockles of my heart are warmed by a mention of that book in the latest Saturday Review of Literature. John Mulholland, former vice president of the American Society of Magicians and editor of the professional magazine, the Sphinx, calls the book "a hoax done during a brilliant scientist's fritterous moments." In other words, the doctor did a marvelous job of leg-pulling. Tibetan telepathy should be laid quietly to rest—Mulholland reports that the lamas "have never heard of the idea of thought-transference," and indeed have no native word for it.

* * * *

But telepathy, I see, has reared its persistent head in this country. Sunday's Post held an article by Dr. J. B. Rhine, of Duke University, in which he described some serious experiments on the subject. A Mr. Pearce, it seems, could name from seven to nine cards correctly in a hidden pack of 25 made up of five denominations. Because this beats the sheer numerical probability of 5 out of 25, Dr. Rhine cries telepathy.

But even though Pearce and one other once made perfect scores (which is a shot of 1 to 100,764,245!) I would still ask that telepathy, if it is any good at all, should be far better. No scientific phenomenon is proven by a mere 16 per cent improvement on chance.

The joker, of course, lies in the fact that only 20 out of 100 subjects showed any "clairvoyance" at all. One out of five men is easily lucky for a while.

NRA Sends Officer To W. Va. Test Case

Charleston, W. Va., May 28 (Spl.). W. L. Pencke, of Washington, assistant counsel for the litigation offices of the NRA, has been assigned as an "unofficial observer" to the test case of the West Virginia NRA enforcement law, now pending in the Kanawha County intermediate court.

The case is the first brought against the State NRA enforcement act passed by the last Legislature.

The suit was brought by 17 Charleston dry cleaning concerns, which obtained temporary injunctions against three other dry cleaning concerns restraining them from cutting prices for cleaning and pressing to 25 cents from the code minimum of 75 cents.

"They're going FIRST CLASS again"

That the trend is definitely back to First Class again is indicated by the fact that Cunard showed an increase in First Class carryings during the year 1933.

The reason is not hard to discover when one recalls that First Class staterooms in the completely renovated Aquitania and Berengaria, formerly $335 each for two, are now but $237 . . . with many double their former size. Outside rooms available for as little as $216. There is no substitute for a First Class ticket. You can take your car along as baggage, too.

EUROPEAN TRAVEL COSTS ARE DOWN!

Cunard First Class rates are reduced by as much as 40%. Railroad fares abroad average 30% less and hotel rates 36% less. Send for folder of complete facts which prove European Travel cheaper in 1934 than in 1926, the "year of normalcy", despite foreign exchange differentials.

Visitor Sees Changes in Washington

Senora de Maira Spends Several Days in D. C.; Absent 30 Years.

Resided at the Chilean Legation Here With Her Father.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

There is never a day when Washington does not welcome some interesting and distinguished visitor, and for the last few days a most interesting visitor has been at the Mayflower, Senora de Maira, who, with her husband, Senor Don Jose Antonio de Maira, and their daughter, Senorita Carmen Maira, of Santiago, Chile, have been in the Capital.

The Mairas are en route to London, where Senor Maira, the legal adviser of the Chilian Nitrate & Iodine Sales Corporation, will attend business meetings. They left Washington yesterday and will sail on June 1.

Senora de Maira visited Washington for the first time 30 years ago when, as a small child, the daughter of the Chilian Minister to Washington, Senor Don Carlos Morla Dicuna, she spent several years here.

Visits Childhood Scenes.

The trip to Washington was planned in order that Senora de Maira could see the scenes familiar to her as the small Carmen Morla Dicuna. The Chilian Legation at that time was at 1333 Sixteenth street, and on Sunday when Senora de Maira set forth to see her former home, she found that the red brick front had been stuccoed with a soft yellow, and a large wing added to the house, which now belongs to Mrs. I. T. Mann. Since the days of the McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt Administrations, when Senora de Maira remembers it, the house has been occupied by many families, most recently by the Turkish Embassy, and later the Persian Legation.

Senora de Maira had attended the old Visitation Convent on Connecticutt avenue and was eager to see her former school, but upon inquiring at her hotel was unable to ascertain where the convent had been located. At a dinner party in the Chilean Embassy Sunday night an apt young person informed Senora de Maira that her school had stood on the very site of the Mayflower Hotel, where she was stopping.

St. Matthew's Church, where the visitor attended mass on Sunday, was also a changed place, the beautiful building which is now being perfected there having replaced the old church.

Knew Theodore Roosevelt.

Senora de Maira was a close friend of the children of the late Theodore Roosevelt, and through them knew the then Vice President well. Their chief bond in common was their pet fox terriers, both beautiful animals. When President McKinley was shot the family of the Chilean Minister was away for the summer, and on their return little Carmen found that her friends had moved to the White House. A few weeks later her own father died, and after a short time the Morla Dicuna family returned to Chile.

On Sunday Senora de Maira was proudly showing to her husband and daughter the sights which she remembered, and after viewing the Washington Monument was asked what the beautiful building ahead of them was. Senora de Maira was forced to admit that she did not remember the marble building with its Greek columns, and was somewhat chagrined at her lack of memory until she learned that the Lincoln Memorial was not built until many years after she had left the Capital.

This charming lady, with her soft, white hair and bright blue eyes, recalls countless events of her childhood in Washington, even remembering names of neighbors and friends, and found Washington not too greatly changed in atmosphere, if in appearance, since the early years of the twentieth century.

Trip By Automobile To Canada Planned

Mrs. Sims and Mrs. McFean Leave Thursday.

The Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Harold H. Sims have as their guests for a few days Mrs. Charles McFean, of Pointe Claire, near Montreal. On Thursday, Mrs. Sims and Mrs. McFean will leave by motor for Canada where Mr. Sims will join Mrs. Sims early next month.

Mr. and Mrs. Sims will sail aboard the Empress of Britain on June 16, to spend the summer in Europe. They will visit in Denmark with Mrs. Sims' family, and later will go to Oslo, Norway, where they will be the guests of the Counselor of the United States Legation and Mrs. Benjamin Thaw, jr., for some time before going to England. They will return to their apartment in the Wardman Park Hotel next fall.

Military Attache Here To Assume New Duties

The newly appointed Military Attache of the Spanish Embassy, Maj. Jose Vidal Colmena, has arrived in Washington to assume his new duties. This morning he will be received at the War Department by the Secretary of War, Mr. George H. Dern; the Assistant Secretary of War, Mr. Harry A. Woodring, and the Chief of Staff, Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Maj. Colmena has succeeded Maj. Joaquin Planell at the Spanish Embassy.

Lieut. Sparrow In Washington On Pilgrimage

Will Attend Decoration of Father's Grave in Arlington.

Lieut. Herbert Sparrow, U. S. A., son of Mrs. Sparrow and the late Capt. Herbert George Sparrow, U. S. N., is the guest of his mother in her apartment at 1661 Cresent place for ten days.

Lieut. Sparrow will attend the Memorial Day ceremonies at Capt. Sparrow's grave at Arlington with the members of the crew of the U. S. S. Takoma, of which Capt. Sparrow was in command when she was wrecked on the Blanquilla reef, off Vera Cruz, Mexico, in 1924. Capt. Sparrow and his three radio men lost their lives in the wreck, and since that time his men have made a pilgrimage to his grave each year on Memorial Day to decorate it with a large anchor made of his favorite flowers, red and white carnations.

During the two terrible storms which wrecked the Takoma, Capt. Sparrow wrote three letters to his wife describing the tragic experiences around which Mrs. Sparrow has written a book entitled, "Last Cruise." One copy is in the Library of Congress and another in the Library of Annapolis.

Following the ceremony, the All-Navy Post will be entertained at luncheon by Mr. Charles Mason Remey, son of the late Rear Admiral Remey, who is an honorary member of the post. Lieut. Sparrow will return to Fort Bragg, N. C., following his visit in Washington.

Dr. B. J. Lloyd, assistant to the Director of the Pan-American Sanitary Bureau; Mr. Huston Thompson, Dr. G. Butler Sherwell, of New York; Mr. Clarence A. Aspinwall, Mr. Lawrence A. Baker, Dr. C. E. McGuire, Mr. Harry J. Frantz and Mr. Louis L. Heath, of the United Press Association; Mr. Douglas B. Cornell and Mr. Nelson D. Riley, of the Associated Press; Mr. Henry L. Sweinhart, of the Havas News; also members of the Pan-American Union staff: Dr. William Manger, counselor; Mr. William A. Reid, foreign trade adviser; Senor Don Jose L. Colom, chief of the Division of Agricultural Cooperation; Senor Don Jose Tercero, chief of the Division of Translations, and Senor Don Federico Sender, of the Division of Translations.

The first of the series of summer concerts given annually in the beautiful Aztec gardens of the Pan-American Union was presented last evening. The United States Army Band, under the leadership of Capt. William J. Stannard, rendered the instrumental portion of the program, and the assisting artist was Juan Arvizu, tenor, of Mexico. Another feature of the evening was a group of four Latin-American dances, interpreted by Lisa Gardiner and her dancers.

Several hundred members of diplomatic, official and resident society were the guests of the Director General of the Pan-American Union, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, and enjoyed a delightful evening on the moonlit terrace overlooking the gardens with their luxuriant foliage and pools of water lilies and tropical fish.

Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert H. Grosvenor, accompanied by their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Melville B. Grosvenor, and their daughter, Miss Gloria Grosvenor, have gone to Hot Springs, Va., where they will spend some time. Others from Washington who are stopping at the Homestead Hotel to enjoy the early summer are Mr. and Mrs. A. Harding Paul and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence B. Hewes, who were accompanied by Mr. Merritt Swift. Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Parker are also spending a few days there.

Lieut. James E. Parker and Lieut. Y. H. Taylor, of the United States Army Air Corps, have arrived in Washington from Selfridge Field, Mount Clemens, Mich., and are at the Carlton.

Mrs. C. C. Glassford And Daughter Here

Later Will Attend Fleet Review at New York.

Mrs. C. C. Glassford and her daughter, Mrs. Lee Parke, are visiting briefly in Washington from their home in Los Angeles. They motored east and will go from the Capital to New York to attend the review of the fleet and will then go to West Point where they will visit Cadet Pelham Glassford, jr. Mrs. Parke was formerly Miss Betty Glassford and made her home in Washington when her father, Brig. Gen. Pelham Glassford was Chief of Police.

Next week Mrs. Parke will return to Washington to establish a home here where she will be joined shortly by Lieut. Parke, U. S. N., who will be stationed here.

Miss Dial Fetes Two Brides-Elect

Miss Dorothy Dial, daughter of former Senator and Mrs. Nathaniel B. Dial, entertained at luncheon yesterday which was followed by bridge, in honor of two brides-elect, Miss Isabel Smith, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Ellison D. Smith, whose marriage to Mr. Charles Alfred Lawton, will take place next month, and Miss Janet Sheppard, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard, who will be married June 9, to Mr. Richard Arnold.

The guests included Mrs. Carlton Pierce, sister of Miss Smith; Mrs. Lionel Glen Anderson, Miss Betty Ansden, Mrs. John W. Roper, and Mrs. M. W. Perry, sister of Miss Dial.

Mrs. Demarest Lloyd On Way to New Bedford

Mrs. Demarest Lloyd closed her home yesterday and left Washington for New Bedford, Mass., where she will join Mr. Lloyd, who is established there for the summer. Mrs. Lloyd will spend a few days there and then will go to New York, whence she will sail for England to visit Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Delavigne for six weeks before returning to New Bedford, Mass., to join Mr. Lloyd and the children for the remainder of the summer.

Mrs. Delavigne, before her marriage in London in April, was Countess Felicia Gizycka, daughter of Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, of Washington.

Mrs. W. S. Culbertson To Open Summer Home

Mrs. William S. Culbertson will go to Blue Ridge Summit, Pa., this week to open her summer home for the season. On June 5, Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson will go to Bryn Mawr to attend the graduation of their daughter, Miss Junia Culbertson, on June 6.

Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson with their two daughters, Miss Junia and Miss Jane, later will go to White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., where Mr. Culbertson will address a bankers' convention.

Fair Play for Woman Worker Advocated by Miss Robinson

Department of Labor Official Says Hesitancy to Tell Age Is Result of Necessity and Fear of Unemployment.

WOMAN'S reluctancy to tell her age—a perennial subject for jokes—should evoke sympathy rather than levity when encountered in the field of employment. There, not vanity, but necessity lies behind a woman's hesitancy to reveal her age—a necessity occasioned by the pitfalls that have opened up in the past decade for mature applicants.

These points were stressed by Miss Mary V. Robinson, of the woman's bureau, Department of Labor, in her talk before the Business and Professional Women's Clubs at the Willard last night. Her subject was "The New Deal In Its Relation to Business and Professional Women."

"The sooner we discard in the New Deal the line of talk about scrapping the older worker, the fairer game we shall play all around," she said. "If group insurance and firm pension provisions are jokers in the pack causing age discrimination, the older worker would certainly prefer a job minus benefit schemes to no job at all. Let us have a new system of playing our cards to keep doors of employment open to able bodied, capable persons even though they have passed the 40 or 50-year line. And let us enact adequate old-age pensions in all States."

Range From 28 to 68.

Using a survey made by the business and professional women's clubs in cooperation with the woman's bureau as a basis for the continuation of her discussion, Miss Robinson went on to say the term "older workers" has become elastic, applied to women of from 28 to 68 years of age, according to policies and complexes being built up in different employment circles.

"The story of the business and professional woman is far from dazzling when the spotlight is turned on the average woman in the group," asserted Miss Robinson, "for it proves America has not really been such a land of golden opportunity it has so often been proclaimed.

"Through the past few decades women have gone forward, but at a slow pace. They have encountered discrimination on every side, for tradition and lingering prejudice have shackled them in their progress.

"For instance, there has always been a decided tendency in this country to pay a woman less than a man on the basis that he was the mainstay of the family and that she did not have dependents.

Fallacy Is Obvious.

"The fallacy of this argument is obvious from findings of the survey. Almost two-thirds of the women included in the survey carried some burden of family obligation.

"It showed that the average married woman working for remuneration was even more likely to have dependents than the single woman.

In discussing the problems facing the average woman who seeks employment, Miss Robinson said it was deplorable how many women seized the first jobs they could get without any regard as to whether they were the types of position in which they could do their best work.

The New Deal could render a great service to all women seeking employment, she said, by speeding up the re-organization of the Federal and State public employment system with the ultimate goal of a Nation-wide network equipped with complete information of the whole labor market on one hand and detailed classified information about available workers on the other.

Would Correct Situation.

"Such a plan," she said, "would eliminate the haphazardness that has existed in our whole employment regime, and which is largely responsible for many women holding jobs totally unsuited to them.

Miss Robinson mentioned woman's status would be greatly helped if the New Deal brought about an elimination of all types of sex prejudice.

"While occupational barriers have been lowered," she said, "until women have entered almost every type of business and profession, they are still victims of discrimination.

"Women workers are looking forward to the time when the double-wage standard—whereby men receive higher compensation than women for the same amount and the same quality of work—will be weeded out.

"The business and professional woman is a vital part of our industrial structure, and now as the wheels of our industrial machinery are beginning to turn a little more regularly, she will be in greater demand again. We hope and believe her adaptability and courage will win her a firmer and surer place in her chosen field; that she will be given the new and fairer deal that she deserves."

Delphian Group Topics Cover Broad Range

"Latin Literature" and "Simple Life" Among Features.

"LATIN Literature" will be the subject of discussion at the meeting of the Roosevelt Chapter of the Delphian Society at 10 o'clock this morning at the Hamilton Hotel. Mrs. Edwin A. Halsey will lead the discussion.

Other topics that will be reported on are: "The Simple Life," by Gladys B. Middlemis; "Arcadian Shepherds, Eclog V." by Mrs. J. Ward Mankin; "The Seasons on the Farm," by Mrs. Finis Garrett; "On Bee-Keeping," by Mrs. W. E. Clark, and "Deeds of Augustus Ancestor," by Mrs. William T. Gill.

Y. W. C. A. Group Meets.

The publicity committee of the Young Women's Christian Association will meet at noon today for luncheon, to be followed by the committee meeting.

* * * *

The business and professional women's department will hold its May dinner tonight at Vacation Lodge in Cherrydale.

The program will include "An Evening with MacDowell," with Miss Carrie Sanders, pianist, playing MacDowell's "Woodland Sketches;" Miss Mary Burnett, soloist, singing several of MacDowell's compositions, and Miss Vera Jones, speaking on the "Life of MacDowell."

Dinner Tonight.

The American Gold Star Mothers' convention, which opened last night at the Hamilton Hotel, will continue today with business sessions, followed by a dinner at 6:30 o'clock tonight at the Hamilton Hotel. Mrs. E. S. Bruce is in charge of the dinner arrangements.

The convention will end tomorrow with a sightseeing tour which will include a visit to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, where memorial services will be held.

The Business Women's Council will meet at 6:30 o'clock tonight in the chapel of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church to hold its annual missionary dinner in honor of Miss Lucile Smith. This will take the place of the regular weekly meeting.

Mrs. Russell William Magne will be the guest speaker at the Soroptimist Club's luncheon at 1 o'clock today at the Willard Hotel. Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch, president, will preside.

The literary circle of the Curley Club will hold its meeting tonight at the home of Miss Mary Connelly, 1234 Girard street northeast. Miss Isabel Connor, chairman, will preside.

Honor guests at the luncheon of the Women's National Press Club at 1 o'clock today at the Willard Hotel will be Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Russell.

Development of Upright Children Furnishes Greatest Career for Women, Says Mrs. Roper

Secretary of Commerce's Wife Believes Home Is Life's Center.

Has Enjoyed Unusual Success With Her Gardening.

To bring closer to the great American public those who play a prominent part in the law making and administration in our country has been the object of The Washington Post's "First Ladies of the Capital" interview series conducted by the Radio Reporter over a National Broadcasting Co. network. Twice weekly over WRC and WMAL coast-to-coast listeners meet major figures in the National limelight over the ether waves.

By Margaret Santry
The Radio Reporter.

DEPLORING the Nation-wide tendency toward smaller families and less home life, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, yesterday proved an able radio champion of the wife who elects the home and hearth as the stronghold for her talents and interests.

As the first Cabinet lady to grace The Washington Post's "First Ladies of the Capital" interview series, Mrs. Roper chatted interestingly to a Nation-wide radio audience from Station WRC over a National Broadcasting Co. network at 11:45 o'clock.

Something of the ideas and ideals that have motivated her in rearing her family, running her home, fulfilling her social duties and discharging her obligation to society at large through her social welfare activities all had a part in her tete-a-tete with the radio reporter.

Affirming that the home should have a more important place as the center of family life, Mrs. Roper contended that where modern parents allow clubs, schools, playgrounds and other units outside the home to supplant instead of supplement home influence and training, the result in the child itself can be compared to the hothouse plant as against the plant raised in the normal course of Nature.

Lack Stamina, Character.

"You can grow beautiful flowers in a hothouse, but as a rule they lack the stamina, endurance and character developed by weathering the forces of nature, that is, the discipline they receive in the yard and in the field," she said.

Acknowledging that many women were allowing outside agencies to relieve them of much of the responsibility of child care that they might pursue outside careers, she commended wives and mothers who gave full time to their jobs.

Mrs. Roper: "I am thankful that careers do not lie exclusively in the business or professional fields. It is my opinion that the mother who rears a noble son and a beautiful and considerate daughter has pursued a career equal to that of the writer of a good book, or a successful performer on the theatrical stage or in the moving picture. Does any one doubt, Miss Santry, that the mothers of George Washington and Robert E. Lee did not have eminently successful careers?"

Miss Santry: "It seems to me you have had an eminently successful career in that respect yourself, in rearing five boys and two girls, all of whom have graduated with high honors from their respective universities and colleges."

Mrs. Roper: "In my case, I made up my mind to devote myself primarily to the interests of my husband and children, and I created this attitude and fell in love with the work. Attitudes and habits of thinking and action can be created, and when helpful habits of mind are formed, one gets, in my opinion, as much pleasure in pursuing the routine tasks connected with a home as in any tasks that require less personal sacrifice.

Life's Greatest Pleasure.

"There is no greater pleasure than seeing human beings develop in the proper way. It is indeed most gratifying to watch your own child develop physically from the food you yourself prepare for it, to witness character forming from your counsel and painstaking teachings, to see moral ideals asserting themselves from the emphasis that you have put on religious or Bible's precepts."

Those outside interests Mrs. Roper has managed time for have included social welfare that has to do with better housing. "You can not expect to get the best results from training human beings without homes that are sanitary and with some of the conveniences."

Mrs. Roper is no bridge player, she was firm in announcing. For recreation she has devoted herself to her garden, with which she enjoys unusual success, her church work and the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Something of the social duties incumbent upon a Cabinet lady also had part in yesterday's radio discussion. Mrs. Roper maintained "I have never considered myself a society woman, although I love the society of my friends, and I have found keeping up the friendship ties I have made in the 35 years since my husband and I first came to Washington a very happy phase of my life."

Her Program.

The Cabinet lady's season program included one honor luncheon to Mrs. Roosevelt, one to Mrs. Garner, and one to Mrs. Henry T. Rainey, wife of the Speaker of the House. Also for Mrs. Roper there was a large reception to all the heads and executives who work in the Department of Commerce under her husband.

The yearly dinner which each Cabinet member gives to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt was consolidated this year into one dinner given by all, at the request of the President. Four "at homes," the first of which was attended by over 500 people, the others by between 300 and 400 guests, were another part of Mrs. Roper's busy social program this season.

Miss Santry: "and do you do all your entertaining in that lovely big home of yours?"

Mrs. Roper: "Except for one or two occasions, like our dinner in honor of Ambassador and Mrs. Josephus Daniels a few weeks ago, which we held in a hotel, we have all our entertaining at home. I am proud to say that for these, all the food is prepared right in my home, excepting ice cream and fancy cakes, which are obtained from a caterer."

Miss Santry: "So much for your entertainment duties. They say that Secretary Roper is one of the hardest working men in the Administration. What does he do for relaxation?"

Works for Relaxation.

Mrs. Roper: "He just works more for relaxation. He has genuine love for work and for people—a sustaining philosophy of home and faith. He likes various kinds of games. We have a concrete shuffle board out on the lawn out of which he gets a lot of fun. He gets his real mental relaxation from reading, in which we both join frequently.

"Biography and philosophy, and literature bearing on his work comprise his reading tastes. He says he enjoys biographies of great men because of their inspiration to keep him going on. He believes one should never stop studying and confering with people living and dead. He says: 'Never expect to know it all about anything, and your mental, social and cooperative attitudes will be wholesome and constructive.'"

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, famous Washington hostess, will speak from Station WMAL over a coast-to-coast network Friday at 2 p. m., in this "First Ladies of the Capital" series.

THE MOTHER WHO REARS a noble son, or a beautiful, considerate daughter has achieved a career equal to that of author or actress, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, above, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, told a Nation-wide radio audience yesterday.

Harris & Ewing.

"WOMEN OF THE LACE collar class deserve a fairer deal," says Miss Mary Robinson.

Old Adages Lack Appeal To Children

Detroit School Pupils Can Not Be Spoofed Educator Says.

DETROIT, Mich., (U.P.).—Spoofing of Detroit school children is no longer a possibility in the opinion of Frank Cody, superintendent of schools. And so, such good old copy book maxims that every schoolboy of the past remembers as "The early bird catches the worm," have been abolished.

Cody explained, "The children of this generation will not follow such admonitions, and they discover that while the early bird may possibly catch the worm, the worm gets punished for early rising."

Then there is also that old adage about "Early to bed and early to rise," which is supposed to be conducive to health, wealth and wisdom.

Children Are Skeptical.

The present-day child, it seems, gets pretty skeptical about it all when he sees many persons who are reasonably wealthy and reasonably healthy staying up until all hours and sleeping until noon.

Cody's comments were the result of the utterances of Dr. Howard M. Francisco, of Knoxville, Tenn., a psychiatrist and superintendent of a hospital for the insane.

Dr. Francisco deplored such practices as teaching children they are "just as good as the next fellow" and may be President some day. If he could publish the Nation's textbooks, he added, he would omit admonitions for children to "strive always to do your best."

Has Harmful Results.

Dr. Francisco's point, apparently, was that sooner or later Johnny learns he doesn't have the same chance as others and becomes disillusioned, embittered, and often develops an acute inferiority complex because his career falls far below his expectations.

Cody said he did not know what was taught in Tennessee, but in Detroit there are no such teachings as Dr. Francisco complains of.

Dr. Ward W. Harrison, recognized authority on psychiatry, declared that there was no question but what teaching children they were of the same mental stature would prove harmful. He added, however, that such teachings, if practiced, were only a contributing factor to disillusionments which lead to suicide or pronounced complexes.

Child's Smugness Held Only An Echo of Parents' Attitude

Our children are self-righteous and smug about giving their discarded clothing and toys to poorer children, b e m o a n conscientious fathers and mothers and these parents wonder why.

The fault is not in the children's character, but in their training, answers Josette Frank, editor of Child Study Magazine. Miss Frank points out that the child only expresses more frankly the same smugness grown-ups feel when they do a charitable deed.

Children, she says, can be trained to feel in terms of sharing, rather than think in terms of giving. If they are taught in this manner, they will eventually develop the idea that they are supplying things where they are needed rather than giving grandly from their own plenty.

Giving within the family often helps a child develop a realization of the need of sharing with others.

When he learns that there is need for sharing, consideration, and concern within the family, he can carry the same ideals into the outer world.

All intelligent children soon realize that there is a marked difference in the social status of individuals in our social-economic order. Parents should explain to children the unequal distribution of material things, and the unjustness of the situation, and as they grow older, help them develop a concept of social justice.

Art Exhibition Is Shared By Children and Adults

Yardley School's Annual Show Will Be Held This Afternoon; Duncan Phillips Acts as Judge; Prizes to Be Awarded.

PAINTINGS by adults and by children will form two classes of showings at the Yard School of Art's annual exhibition tea, to be held at 4 o'clock this afternoon at 2100 Bancroft place.

Mr. Duncan Phillips, of the Phillips Art Gallery, will judge the pictures and award the prizes at the show, which is to be in charge of Miss Margaret Moffatt Yard, director of the school. Miss Yard will be assisted by Mrs. Stanley Smith, Miss Elizabeth Syphen and Miss Mary Park Clements.

Among those whose paintings or drawings are entered in the adult class are Nancy Ansell, Agnes Brown, Alida Davis, Hazel Demo, Barbara Korff, Maya Nafziger, Gertrude Power, Frances Todd, Anne Totten, Harold Worthem and Richard Wyly.

In the children's class exhibitors are Karen Lloyd, Eleanor Hempstone, Miriam Tittman, Elizabeth Fish, Ruty-Maye Snodgrass, Eleanor Hansford Snodgrass, Rene Beard, Carol Camblom, Isabelle Marie Case, Laurence Dennett Genevieve Dillman, Wilma Dinowirzer.

Others in the children's class are Josephine Henderson, Jerry Howenstein, Dorothy Jobes, Dorothy Mayo, Patty Moses, Verna Patrick, DeBoone Piggott, Deneyse Rizik, Alan Rosenthall, Roberta Scholz, Margheritta Sterling, Nancy Thomas and Louise Vance.

Scenes from local parks, fantastic landscapes illustrating some well-loved fairy tale, or colorful representations of the animal kingdom, go to make up part of the children's work. The youthful artists range in ages from 6 to 15 years, and some of the results they have achieved through the medium of poster paints are remarkable.

Post Staff Photo.

THE ANNUAL EXHIBIT of the Yard School of Art, 2100 Bancroft place, to be held this afternoon, will abound with pictures the like of this. Here we have 6-year-old Verna Patrick putting the finishing touches on her entry.

Women Sleuths Curbing Crime At San Diego

Secret Committee Has 1,400 Members; No Cost Involved.

SAN DIEGO, Calif., May 28 (Spl.).—Women of this city have taken the lead in a new feminine activity—that of fighting crime.

In response to an appeal of Mary Roberts Rinehart, author, that women of the Nation go to war against crime, a woman's secret committee, which started with 600 members and now has 1,400, is working quietly against vice and lawlessness in San Diego.

Already the activities of the committee have aroused fear and resentment in the underworld.

The secret crime committee was an outgrowth of a plan evolved by the San Diego Women's Civic Center. The committee is working under direction of Mrs. A. L. Simpson, chairman of the civic center crime department.

Identity Is Guarded.

The identity of the members of the feminine Scotland Yard is closely guarded. To start the organization in the six councilmanic districts of the city, Mrs. Simpson appointed a No. 1 woman in each area. Each No. 1 made three appointments and these groups of three chose others until the organization was completed.

Women from all walks of life are included in the list of secret operatives. A large amount of data relative to crime has been assembled by the workers. All this is kept in secret files. City and county law agencies report a decrease in crime here in recent months.

Mrs. Simpson, as head of the group, has received many threats and also bribery offers. "I live in daily fear of criminal attack," she said. "I am watched every day. But the work of our committee will not be checked. We are determined that crime must end."

No Money Spent.

No money has been spent to carry on the work. Some of the workers have been offered bribes if they would "lay off" in certain quarters.

Part of the information obtained is sent to Washington. The committee is working in close contact with Federal investigators in this region.

The work of the woman's crime committee has attracted wide attention and women's organizations in other cities are writing Mrs. Simpson for details of the plan.

Give Each Child Perfect Life, Aim of Education in Alabama

Traditional Methods of Teaching Are Disregarded at Mrs. Marietta Johnson's School; No One Fails in Classes.

"THE school where no child ever fails." This sentence describes Mrs. Marietta Johnson's School of Organic Education in Fairhope, Ala.

Children who have tremblingly carried home report cards with fatal "F's" on them, and worried parents who can't understand Johnnie's inability to pass Latin are inclined to be dubious. It is hard to believe Utopia is no further off than that little Southern town by the Gulf of Mexico.

It is there Mrs. Johnson has been conducting for 27 years a school, the sole purpose of which is to give the child as perfect a life as possible. Traditional methods of education are calmly disregarded in this institution, where the curriculum is based entirely on the physical, mental and nervous needs of the child.

"Studying the methods of education prevalent when I taught in a State teachers' college, I found one great fault," said Mrs. Johnson, who has been giving lectures on progressive education in Washington.

"Life" Was Disregarded.

"None of them took into consideration that mysterious thing called life. They attempted to force certain methods of ideas, contrary to the nature of the child, upon him, and said they were disciplining him for life."

Education, Mrs. Johnson then explained, is not a method of preparing for life. It is growth, and growth has no aim beyond itself.

"In our school no child learns to read or write before the age of eight," she said. "Young children were meant to develop physically, not to force themselves to close concentration that is a strain upon their nervous systems. Intellectual pusuits are artificial, and should not be imposed upon the very young child.

"When the students reach the age where they study academic studies, they are not put in classes, receive no report cards, are not praised because they do their work. They learn to work for the joy of working, and in that they find themselves. They do well in their classes because they are not made self-conscious or fearful by worrying about their marks. They never fail a subject, as that develops a sense of inferiority. They are allowed to grow naturally.

No Specialists.

"No child is accelerated, or allowed to specialize. Children who are advanced in academic subjects are encouraged to learn to do things with their hands, to develop their social interests."

Many so-called child prodigies are merely acting to please their parents, Mrs. Johnson pointed out, saying:

"The ten year old who announces she is making a collection of antique vases is probably not interested at all. She has been taught that this is admirable, and causes comment. Such a little girl should be encouraged to take dancing lessons, or go out for sports. In that way she will forget her interest in antiques, and will be a well-rounded person."

Mrs. Johnson looks forward to the day when children will be educated in schools whose purpose is growth in confidence and certainty.

"These schools should extend all the way from primary grades through college, and should have but one principle," she concluded, "that education is growth."

Styles Treat Older Women Better in 1934

Finger-Tip Length Coat and Brimmed Hat Are Attractive.

NEW YORK, May 28 (AP).—Fashion is kinder to older women this spring than for some seasons.

Three types of clothes being shown for spring and summer are kind to the mature figure, as well as being smart. They are the loose, finger-tip length coat, the brimmed hat, and the high-cut shoe.

Since almost every summer costume has its own coat and the ensemble is queen, the older woman can be in the swim at every hour of the day.

Street ensembles combine a printed dress with plain coat of this type, or vice versa. The new short-sleeved coat, with long gloves, adds variety. The coat may or may not be lined with the material of the dress. For warmer weather, it may be of silk.

Attractive Street Wear.

For street wear, a wide-brimmed turn-down sailor is flattering to the middle-aged woman. A bit more daring is a modified derby with a tyrolean feather ornament.

The net suit, welcomed by old and young alike, is peculiarly suited to the older woman. Trimmed with bands of tucking and made with a longer and looser coat than for the young, it should see her through the most sizzling summer day.

Lace evening gowns are again smart, and lace, too, is flattering to the woman of 50. A fingertip length coat of taffeta or faille and frilly lace gloves add to the charm without detracting from the dignity of the costume.

Navy Blue Favored.

Navy blue is a favored color for spring and summer. Brown is also good for warm weather clothes, particularly with light accessories.

Hats with brims are a welcome relief to women who worried about not looking well in the off-the-face hats of recent months. Sailors are both smart and becoming to older faces. A beret suited to the mature woman is high in back and is pulled over the forehead.

The monk's shoe, the high-cut Oxford, and the low heel that is smart this spring are a boon to the older woman, who should abjure sandals and spike heels.

To make her head as smart as her clothes, fashion authorities recommend that the older woman have wide, soft waves. The hair should be shorter than formerly and well thinned out, and if it is white, she should be careful to keep it from acquiring a yellowish tinge.

Wide World Photo.

KIND TO THE mature woman are this season's brimmed hat and finger tip length coat, sometimes sleeveless.

Clever Sewing And Designing Bring Success

It's an Easy Matter to Get a Complete Summer Wardrobe Now.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A GIFT for designing, a knack for sewing, plus amazingly reasonable prices, is the fortune in hand of a local seamstress.

Unlike so many who ply their trade with the needle, she has her place of business convenient to the car line, and scarce a five-minute ride by automobile from the heart of the city.

With her aid it will be an easy matter to accumulate a summer wardrobe for "almost nothing." She will make simple frocks for as little as $3. Those with more intricate lines, and a full share of furbelows, will cost $5.

Furthermore, she will not only make these frocks, she will help design them. Some of her creations of late have caused a stir in smart circles.

With talents truly unlimited, she can turn out formal frocks, or tailored suits after the manner of a French coutourier at reasonable prices.

Dark Secrets for All.

Things your best friend won't tell you are written out in black and white in a new astrological game.

With a convenient price of 10 cents, it's likely enough to appear at numbers of informal gatherings and help the guests to find out all sorts of things about themselves.

It tells how to choose a husband, or a wife, suggests your best bet for an occupation, your luckiest flower, and color. With perfect frankness it discusses your ailments, and even tells you which ones to guard against, gives a lengthy discussion of your characteristics, both good and bad, and ever so many facts about your constitution.

Aid for Slenderizing.

It takes an extraordinary amount of energy to devise all the beauty aids which a cosmetologist is frequently thinking up.

Now she has released some slenderizing bath salts. Speaking of them, she says, "they dissolve fatty particles in the body, thereby helping excess fat to disappear. They stimulate the circulation, and help a woman reduce without the depressing effects of severe methods. Furthermore," she adds, "they tend to soften and smooth the skin!"

They are available in an F street store.

Erase Offensive Odors.

A tiny whiff of perfume, the Orientals say, has the power to sway the thoughts and desires of the mightiest potentate.

But perfume availeth nought declare the moderns, if it is forced to compete with even the faintest suggestion of unpleasant personal odor. The chief offender against this basic phase of feminine daintiness is perspiration. Equally offensive to the sight is the ugly appearance of clothing that has been stained under the arms or across the back.

To check this excessive perspiration, a specialist of twenty-five years' standing recommends her new spray deodorant. It is a clear liquid, coming in a delightful little spray bottle, both efficient and convenient to use.

Don't be swayed by some of the old-fashion bogey's that still struggle on in 1934. Don't fear checking excess perspiration. Fastidious women all over the world are doing it. Physicians recommend it, especially for those closed areas such as the underarms where evaporation is difficult. This applies to both men and women.

The new product, already bottled in the spray container, sells for 50 cents.

• • • •

Beware of Spring Rains.

If it isn't convenient to wear your toe rubbers, a downtown store suggests carrying them in your purse, or your pocket, neatly folded in little rubber bags.

They further say that as long as summer is here why not celebrate with summer toe rubbers, spotlessly white? These, and also black and brown ones, already folded in the little rubber bags, cost only 38 cents!

• • • •

"Toppers" for The Beach.

The term "toppers," used frequently to describe the smokestack hats which gentlemen prefer, has gone fickle and fastened itself now to beach bandeaux, new candidates for summer wardrobe favorites.

Their claim to popularity is based in part on their adaptability to several beach costumes, such as slacks, shorts, or split skirts. Certain toppers featured in a local shop make their bid because of their low price—59 cents—and their attractive designs in colored stripes.

Toppers one and all can be folded up to fit into small space.

For Breakfast Use.

The pancake and corn set, recent arrival in an F street shop, is apt to become a common sight at breakfast parties from now on.

It includes a little "pourer," odd-shaped pitcher with a long spout, a little tray, and spherical salt and peppers, all in untarnishable chrome.

The "pourer" or pitcher—no term suiting exactly—is for sirup, or butter, as the occasion demands.

Every Person's Likes and Dislikes Shown in Variety of Cool Drinks

Most Give Preference to Fruit Juices, but Not All.

By Ann Barrett.

WARM day, cold drink. From now on, it'll be a question just what to put into the long drinks that slake warm-weather thirst. Fruit juices will get the heaviest vote. But there'll be those who'll hold out for iced tea. Some who'll demand iced coffee. And others who will find the greatest pleasure in a tasty milk shake.

The chief point to bear in mind is to have the makings of a cold drink ready. Canned and bottled fruit juices will speed the making. And so will a home-made sugar syrup used instead of plain sugar for your sweetening. In fact, fruit may be combined with this syrup to make mixing faster still. As in this recipe for lemonade from lemon syrup:

Lemon Syrup.

For this, bring 2 cups granulated sugar and 1 cup water to a boil. Add the thin, yellow rind of 1 lemon (take care not to peel off any of the white that lies under the yellow) and cook gently 5 minutes. Cool this syrup. Then add juice of six lemons (about 1 cup) and strain into a jar or bottle.

How to use this syrup? Just mix or shake 2 tablespoons of it with about ¾ a measuring cup of ice water for each serving. Presto—lemonade! This is the easiest way I know of making lemonade for a crowd.

Grapefruitade.

Since grapefruit juice has been put up in cans, grapefruit drinks have grown enormously popular. Here's one of the best: Cook 2 cups sugar with 2 cups water about 5 minutes and cool it. Then put this syrup into a large shaker with 3 cups grapefruit juice, 2 tablespoons lime juice and 2 cups of crushed ice. Shake till ice is melted.

Currant Tea.

An older favorite that's still popular (currant tea) goes like this: First melt 2 cups of currant jelly over hot water, and combine with 1 cup strong tea, ½ cup lemon juice, 1 cup orange juice. Add about 2 tablespoons of strained honey and shake or stir vigorously. Then pour over ice cubes in glasses, stir and serve.

Chocolate Milk Shake.

Chocolate milk shake is a heartier kind of drink that's especially smooth and delicious when made from a syrup, like this: Melt ½ pound cooking chocolate over hot water. Then stir into it 2¾ cups granulated sugar and ⅛ teaspoon salt. Next, stir in slowly 3 cups boiling water. When smooth, boil 5 minutes. Cool, add 1 teaspoon vanilla and store in refrigerator in bottles or jars till needed. Allow 3 tablespoons of this syrup to 1 cup cold milk for each serving. Top with whipped cream or ice cream.

Florida Fizz.

Here's still another good drink that gets an added note of interest from a frosting of egg: First mix the juice of 2 lemons and 2 oranges with ¾ cup sugar, and let stand till sugar is dissolved. Then beat up a whole egg with a fork, and shake this up with fruit juices in a shaker. Then pour this mixture over ice in 4 glasses. Fill up the glasses with iced gingerale, stir, and serve.

If May 29 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 12:30 to 2:30 p. m. and from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m.

You will be using good judgment if you do not overexert yourself on this date. Avoid lifting any excessive weight, unless someone can help, and thus prevent an undue amount of strain.

The woman born on May 29 should be more than grateful that she has the gift of being capable of holding her own in any controversial issue that might arise.

The child born on May 29, as it grows up, must not be allowed to become officious, especially in its dealings with its little playmates.

The man born on May 29 has a lot of backbone, and will always fight for his rights. If born on this date your wits will enable you to successfully face any intricate situation, and victoriously extract yourself from it.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Too Much or Too Little Salt.

As is the case with sugar, people eat salt according to the dictates of their taste and with no other consideration in mind. In both cases the custom is resulting in considerable damage to health.

We use salt to meet a need in Addison's disease that is quite similar to that produced by hypoglycemia in the treatment of diabetes and in some other conditions. Salt is also the best treatment we have for heat cramps. It is of great service when given internally in the treatment of severe burns, in the treatment of diabetec acidosis, to combat the effects of prolonged vomiting after abdominal operations, in strangulation of the bowels and in babies with obstructions around the stomach.

The body needs the basic minerals of the sodium-potassium-calcium-magnesium group. The one supplied by salt is sodium. Most physiologists think now that the chlorine content of salt is less important than its sodium. The bones especially need lime and perhaps a fair amount of it is needed for the nerves. The cells themselves are rich in potassium or, at least, they contain most of the body's supply of the base. The sodium goes to the serum or the liquid between the cells, the lymph, and the blood.

It all sums up to this: The average person eats too much salt and he is harmed thereby, even though he does not know it as he goes along and may not for years.

The TALKING SPARROW MURDERS

By Darwin Teilhet

The Story So Far.

"A sparrow down there spoke to me. It said distinctly, 'Help! I'm caught!' " With these strange words Kohlmann, the big industrialist, fell, shot, at Tatson's feet as he was crossing a Heidelberg street. Tatson was an American engineer, in a hurry to get home to a job which wouldn't wait. He was arrested, and then released on parole through the efforts of Carlson, his business friend at the plant not far from Heidelberg. But instead of proving his innocence, Tatson seemed every day to become more involved in Kohlmann's murder. In fact, many people were now involved in its web; Spalger, accountant at the bank, also murdered, leaving behind a shortage in his accounts; Geigen, who was buying the plant, and his fiancee, Elaine Edrich, who had been Kohlmann's ward; Taubek, the Nazi leader, who had tried to kill Tatson; Walther Kohlmann, who was reported away on business and didn't come home even for his father's funeral; the mysterious La Roc, with his many letters from brokers; charming, half-Jewish Mischa Dryshenzoff, fleeing from Nazi brutalities, yet apparently working with a Nazi, and finally, Carlson, of the plant, always offering to assist Tatson.

Mischa, whose fortunes seemed somehow linked to those of Tatson, helped him to escape from Taubek, the two fleeing to the Dolphin Inn. There Tatson left her, to seek help from the police, only to discover that the Dolphin was Taubek's stronghold. In terror he rushed back to it with Kresch.

Now let Tatson himself go on with the story.

KRESCH'S mushy voice blurred through the drown of the motor.

"Herr Taubek owns the Dolphin. We found that out three days ago checking his alibis. He uses it to trap"——the Opal caught a bump and rocketed against the road and Kresch continued stolidly—"to trap the Jews. How did Herr Taubek know you were with the girl?"

"I don't know."

"When you telephoned Heidelberg?"

"Either he cut the wires or the storm broke them down."

"The storm wasn't bad enough to break wires," Kresch shouted.

"We thought it might have been one of the waiters who told him." The car jerked the breath away from me.

"We'll find out." Kresch put his big hands on his knees. "We'll find out this time."

The Opel held its guts tightly. It missed two bumps for every one it pushed into the rutted road. The yellow square of the inn, surmounted by a tawny slate roof, grew and enlarged into vision. We keeled around a muddy bank and a stone culvert, slid ten feet in coarse stone gravel and five men pitched out in front of the scrolled door of the inn.

The light morning breeze was playing with the wine-colored wooden sign. It was cut in the fashion of a dolphin. The tail wriggled in the wind and the blunt nose made scratching creaks against the warped post and Kresch's knuckles bounced away from the wooden door with dull thuds. I held close by him. The chauffeur lumbered up the brick walk with the machine gun. Kresch's fist dropped from the door. With deliberate care the chauffeur finished spreading the steel legs of the tripod.

The black nozzle of the machine gun faltered in a narrowing circle. The nozzle felt for its position on the door of the Dolphin. The chauffeur lowered his from to the screw sights. The lock and handle of the wooden door melted away into a punched and blackened hole. The chauffeur stood up.

We flooded into the inn. The innkeeper was kneeling by the iron rim of the stove. His knees were drawn underneath his belly. His flabby head was stretched out on the floor, and his white nose laid horizontally in a red puddle, as if he were sniffing the color. His hands splayed out beyond his head with the fingers spread out.

Kresch rolled the innkeeper over, placed a large hand into his shirt. "Still warm," he grunted, looking placidly around the room. "Herr Tatzon, please, where is the room you left the girl?—wait! Gorben! After him!"

I went right through the door of Mischa's room and caught myself at the end of the bed. When I saw the amused grin on the bed I heeled and kicked open the partition door into the other room. My room was empty. Kresch and Gorben circled the bed. I went up to them. Kresch bent over the bed and gazed reproachfully at Taubek. He was lying on the bed dressed in evening clothes. His hands were folded across his white waistcoat.

Kresch lifted one of the hands, saw the brownish-red spot as big as the bottom of an ink bottle and let the hand drop, saying with a sour smile, "Aufwiedersehn, lieber Herr Taubek." Herr Taubek grinned back at him. A big bluebottle fly buzzed happily into the room, lighted on Taubek's forehead and crawled down over the open eye and the little policeman brushed the fly away.

I returned a few minutes later. Kresch was stating . . . "his body is still warm."

"Mischa isn't in any of the rooms on this floor," I exclaimed.

One of the men downstairs called up, "There's a woman shot through the mouth in the kitchen."

Kresch flopped back the head of the dead woman in the inn kitchen. "Is there a telephone, Gorben? Good. Get the Mannheim police. This is in their district. Have them bring a photographer. Herr Tatzohn, will you and Kleinschmidt go carefully through the inn? Carefully, please. I don't want the girl to be hidden here."

Kleinschmidt and I went out of the kitchen. He stepped over the cook. She was on her back with Kresch and Johannes squatting over her. The old woman's face was smashed open in a great red laugh.

Mischa had vanished. There was no trace of her. In addition to her disappearance, the letters hidden in the bureau drawer also had evaporated. I returned downstairs and told Kresch. He promptly examined Taubek's pockets and then the clothes of the innkeeper and the cook, but the letters were not to be found.

"Did she know you had them?"

"I'm certain she did not."

"She couldn't have seen you put them in the drawer when she came into your room?"

"I don't see how."

"Gott!" he said, and wiped his forehead. "This is tangled. She must have seen you hide them and then took them after you left."

The Mannheim police car thudded to a stop. Three men piled out and ran into the inn. The leader was a tall, hatchet-faced fellow with a Nazi sleeve band on his brown coat. Kresch called him Herr Polizeidirektor Sleischen and took him upstairs to where Taubek was grinning.

Sleischen and Kresch came downstairs, arguing. The photographer followed with his equipment. Taubek was to remain until another car could be sent for. Sleischen talked in a low voice to Kresch, pointing at me with a finger stained brown. Sleischen ended the discussion: "I will have it my way!" and angrily commanded his photographer to hurry with the pictures of the innkeeper and the cook.

Picture of Bodies Taken.

"Sleischen doesn't think Mischa could have done it?" I whispered to Kresch.

"It was necessary to explain why you and Fraulein Dryshenzoff were here last night."

"He knows we were escaping from Taubek?"

"I told him. The innkeeper worked for Herr Taubek. The innkeeper was the only one who could inform Herr Taubek that you and the Fraulein were here."

"That can't be—why didn't the innkeeper phone Taubek at once?"

"Perhaps the innkeeper wanted to wait until the Fraulein was alone.

The photographer finished taking the pictures of the two bodies. Sleischen came between us, his gray face hanging down on his chest. "This is the American? You will come with me to Mannheim."

"He will come with me," said Kresch amiably.

"He will come with me."

"Get in my car, Herr Tat-zohn," Kresch ordered, putting a cigar between his wide lips.

"You can't do this, Herr Kresch! Herr Taubek was a Nazi Fuhrer. He was from my Nazi cell!"

"This is my case," stated Kresch. "I won't permit it."

"How many men have you, Herr Polizeidirektor? Two—uhm—there are six of us. Gorben! You will accompany Herr Tat-zohn to our car."

"I will have you broken for this, Herr Kresch."

"As you wish, Herr Polizeidirektor. But as long as this is my case I shall remain in charge. Have you a match?"

Gorben and I went to the Opel. The other Heidelberg police followed. Kresch and Sleischen appeared in the doorway a few minutes later. From the car we heard Sleischen threaten: "Herr Kresch! We shall find out who has the authority in this district."

"As you wish. Good morning, Herr Polizedirektor." And Kresch waddled benignly down the brisk walk.

Johannes leaned forward from the back seat and whispered, "I walked both ways down the road, Herr Kresch, as you requested. There is only one farmhouse—a quarter of a kilometer ahead of us—near enought to possibly hear any shots."

The Opel stopped in front of a farmhouse with blue shutters. Kresch immediately called attention to the black telephone wire connecting the house to the yellow poles straggling along the sunken road. A red-cheeked woman came to the door.

Her eyes stretched when Kresch informed her he was of the Heidelberg police.

"You heard no shots from the inn?"

Name Was Like Violin.

Yes, she had heard a rattling sound half an hour before.

"Before then?" asked Kresch. The rattling sound was our machine gun.

No, she had heard nothing before that from the inn. No, she had seen no one, either. Aber ja—she remembered. There was the Herr who stopped in to telephone shortly bebore she had heard the rattling sound. He was the only one she saw go by. He was in an automobile . . . The man who telephoned? What was he like? Distinguished. His hair was the color of hay. Yes, she had overheard the conversation. She was in the same room. She was not going out just because some one used her telephone. He had called up a number in Heidelberg. She did not remember very well what he had said. It had not made sense.

"Try to remember," urged Kresch.

"He said over the telephone if any one was to call his office they were to say he was busy in his office and had been there all morning and could not be disturbed." She twisted her apron. "I do not understand because he was here, but he said he was there——"

"Did he give his name?"

"No, not to me. But I heard it when he talked over the telephone. But I do not know if I heard right. It was like the name of the violin."

7,000 Watch Dress Parade At Annapolis

Presentation of Colors Features Festivities of Washington.

Graduation Ceremonies at Academy Set for Thursday.

By Francis O. White.

Annapolis, Md., May 28.—Festivities incident to commencement at the United States Naval Academy virtually reached a peak today with a program of drills featured by a regimental dress parade and the traditional ceremony of presenting the "colors," and three of the year's most important social functions as a climax at night.

The dress parade and color presentation took place on Worden Field, regular drill ground of the midshipmen, at 5:30 p. m., in the presence of some 7,000 persons gathered here from every State in the Nation for the graduation exercises that will be held Thursday morning in Dahlgren Hall.

More temperate atmospheric conditions and semiclear skies supplanted rain and chilly blasts that had prevailed the last three days, so that the bevy of June week girls, and their midshipmen friends, not to mention the fathers and mothers of the embryo officers, made the most of a busy and interesting day.

The midshipmen, attired in full dress uniforms of blue, presented a snappy appearance as they marched on the field behind the full complement of the Academy band, and executed various infantry formations before drawing up at present arms in front of the official reviewing stand. Then the several columns of companies deployed to form three sides of a square.

Colors Presented.

The colors were won by the first company, commanded by John Murray Wilson, Scottsboro, Ind., fourth among the honor men of the graduating class, and his choice to make the presentation of the National and regimental banners was Miss Sara Mumma, Evanston, Ill., senior at the University of Iowa, daughter of Col. W. C. Mumma, United States Army, retired.

The color competition extends throughout the academic year and embraces proficiency in drills and other phases of academic life, including athletics.

At the appointed time, Miss Mumma, wearing a dainty golden-hued costume, stepped from the reviewing stand, and on the arm of Commander W. W. Smith, senior executive assistant of the academy, advanced several paces on the greensward. Simultaneously the successful company commander followed by the color bearers came forward, and the "color girl' went throug hthe ceremony of transferring the flags to the winner. Immediately from the regiment burst a mighty cheer for the color girl, as well as the winning midshioman lieutenant and his company. The company responded with a cheer for the regiment.

Until a few years ago this presentation ceremony was marked by the girl and middie kissing, but officials frowned on this and it has been banned.

Today's activities began at 10 a. m. with a physical drill under infantry arms, presented by two battalions. This, too, was viewed by a gallery of several thousand. The noon hour was given over to award the Navy "N" and other athletic insignia to midshipmen for prowess in various lines of athletic endeavor during the year.

234 Awards Made.

Football tops major sports and the gridders were first to receive their letters. All told, 234 awards were made. Heading the list of recipients was Fred Borries, Louisville, Ky., star of the gridiron and basket ball court, also a member of the varsity baseball team, who already sports four "N" stars, having participated in that many victories over rival West Point cadets in different sports. Others included Robert P. Harbold, of Washington, center of the varsity football team, member of the lacrosse team and a heavyweight boxer, who is among the graduates. Borries is of the class of 1935. Superintendent Hart and Commander John W. Willcox, director of athletics, addressed the athletes, especially conmmending the triple victory over rival West Point cadets in baseball, field and track and lacrosse on Saturday, and also praised their effort and spirit throughout the year.

Liquor Stores Gird to Fight Bootleggers

Norfolk Opens 2 Shops; Hearings Ordered on More Licenses.

Richmond, May 28 (Spl.).—With drug stores underselling the A. B. C. scores, and bootleggers buying liquor from the stores for resale at double the States prices, the A. B. C. board today expanded its store system by opening two stores at Norfolk and opened hearings here for persons who have been denied licenses because of complaints and the initial inspection reports.

The license hearings are being conducted by Wade M. Miles, director of the division of licenses, and are being held not only in Richmond but in 22 other localities: Newport News, May 29, courthouse, 11 a. m.; Norfolk, May 30, council chamber, 9 a. m.; Emporia, June 1, 10 a. m.; Petersburg, June 1, 2 p. m.; Farmville, June 4, 10 a. m.; Lynchburg, June 4, 2 p. m.; Clifton Forge, June 5, 9 a. m.; Staunton, June 5, 3 p. m.; Charlottesville, June 6, 9 a. m.; Luray, June 6, 2 p. m.; Winchester, June 7, 9 a. m.; Alexandria, June 7, 2 p. m.; Fredericksburg, June 8, 9 a. m.; Tappahannock, June 8, 2 p. m.; Danville, June 11, 2 p. m.; Martinsville, June 12, 9 a. m.; Roanoke, June 12, 2 p. m.; Pulaski, June 13, 9 a. m.; Tazewell, June 13, 2 p. m.; Norton, June 14, 9 a. m.; Marion, June 14, 2 p. m.; Bristol, June 15, 10 a. m.

Sales on Increase.

Meanwhile, A. B. C. store sales reached a grand total today of $92,200. Sales for the past week, the first full week of operation, were reported as $16,600 in the five Richmond stores, compared to $14,100 on the previous Saturday.

Virginia bootleggers have been paying the State ABC stores a high compliment. They have been buying at the Richmond stores, the only stores thus far opened, and selling at a 100 per cent mark-up in Charlottesville, Lynchburg, Lexington and other points.

One of the board's $1 bottles looks so big and bright that it has been fetching $2 to $2.50 on the bootleg market. The State liquor store stamp is pointed out as a proof of quality and purity.

Under the ABC law the State stores are required to sell as much as one gallon at a time on demand. A bootlegger can make the rounds of Richmond's five stores several times and buy several hundred bottles.

Drug Stores May Be Dumping.

This practice may have had something to do with the shortage of several popular brands Saturday. Asked if the drug store underselling mean't a price war, A. B. Clarke, spokesman for the ABC board, said that the drug stores probably are dumping in order to reduce their inventories.

"The board has called upon the drug stores for an inventory of their stocks," he said, "and they may be clearing in preparation for future purchasing through the board."

The inventory ordered is as of May 25 and reports are to be made by June 1.

Two State liquor stores opened in Norfolk today. They will serve a population in excess of 275,000. A third is to be opened during the week, together with others at Virginia Beach, Newport News and Portsmouth.

The board today was preparing to begin a series of hearings of license applicants whose original petitions for licenses were denied for various reasons.

Farmers Lean to Viticulture.

Meanwhile, the board has learned that viticulture is being undertaken by a steadily increasing number of Virginia farmers.

The word may be meaningless for the average person, but it is beginning to have an important significance throughout the rural areas of the State. It is more commonly termed grape growing.

The board has been informed that many farmers in Virginia are planting vineyards this year upon lands that have been withdrawn from the production of other crops.

The hilly country surrounding Charlottesville and other areas once were famous for their grapes, and Virginia wineries once produced some of the finest American wines.

3 More Original Foundations Of Old St. Marys City Found

Pewter Spoons, Spur, Buckle, China and Bottle Are Also Discovered in Excavations for Water Supply; Will Go in State House.

Baltimore, May 28 (Spl.).—Relics of old St. Mary's City of nearly 300 years ago and the foundations of three more buildings in the original town have been uncovered within the last week, it was announced today by J. Spence Howard, a member of the works committee of the Maryland Tercentenary Commission.

The relics include two pewter spoons, a spur, a buckle, a table knife, two keys, hinges, pieces of china and a glass bottle.

Mr. Howard said the relics will be preserved in the State House replica, now nearly completed. He said he hoped some patriotic organization will present a case in which they can be exhibited.

Excavations which led to the discovery of the relics and the foundation were made in preparation for the tercentenary celebration June 15 and 16.

"An abundant water supply will be necessary for the crowds expected at the celebration," he said, "and it was while pipes were being laid that the brick foundation of the home of Col. William Digges were unearthed in a field, near Middle street, in old St. Mary's.

"At about the same time workmen near the pageant field excavated another foundation. It was close to the site of Jelly's Tavern, one of the popular gathering places of the Colonies, and it is thought that possibly the foundation was a part of the tavern, or of an addition to it.

"Another theory is that it might have been the foundation of the law chambers, which are known to have been close by. These foundations will be cleaned out and fenced for the celebration. The council chamber foundation, excavated some time ago, already is fenced.

"The other recently discovered foundation is of a spring house on a hill north of the residence of Phillip Lytle, the first mayor of St. Mary's."

Mr. Howard announced that the pageant grand stand, designed to seat 10,000 people, is almost finished Work of providing a pure water supply also is nearly completed, he said. The water is to be pumped from the Governor's spring, used by the original Colonists, to a 25,000 gallon tank at St. Mary's Female Seminary.

The State Department of Health will see that all the water used by visitors to the fete is purified.

Fisheries Board To Study Report

Richmond, Va., May 29 (Spl.).—A meeting of the State commission of fisheries will be held in Newport News Thursday to consider the report of L. McCarthy Downs, State auditor of public accounts, Richard Armstrong, State commissioner of fisheries, said today.

It also will be decided what steps are to be taken in the cases of C. H. Muse and W. H. Gary, oyster inspectors charged by Downs with having changed figures in their receipt blanks, and having been indebted to the State.

It is expected that the commission also will look into charges that many inspectors have been careless in keeping accounts.

Memorials Dedicated in Plot Surrounding Cross on Island

By Marion Butler.

St. Clements Island, Md., May 28 (Spl.).—Half a hundred Marylanders braved rain and wind-swept waters here yesterday to dedicate memorials in the Ancestral Garden surrounding the 40-foot Maryland Tercentenary Cross, erected last March.

A tablet was dedicated to Mrs. Inez Seymour Milton, descendent of Royal Governor Seymour of Provincial Maryland. Mrs. Milton died this month.

Thirteen boxwoods, from Mount Vernon, a gift of the Maryland State Chapter of the D. A. R., in representation of the 13 original colonies, also were dedicated.

Simple ceremonies were conducted by Mrs. Frank J. Parran, of the Maryland Colonial Dames, who read her original tercentenary poem on "Early Maryland." Miss Amelia Bowie Thomas, granddaughter of Charles Benedict Calvert, also gave a poem recitation, and C. Conrad Stoll sang "Trees" and "The Bells of St. Mary's."

In charge of transportation to the island were Capt. H. Banagan with his boat, Thelma M., and Capt. John C. Butterfield, superintendent of St. Clements Island.

N. B. Hawthorne Dies at Round Hill

Round Hill, Va., May 28 (Spl.).—Noah B. Hawthorne, 75, prominent resident of Loudoun County, died at his home here today following an illness of several months.

He was a native of Washington County, who came to Loudoun County 25 years ago and was active in farming and local business. He served for some years as a member of the school board of Jefferson District.

He is survived by his widow, six sons and three daughters. The funeral will be held Wednesday.

15,000 Here Going to Fete At Baltimore

100,000 Are Expected at Catholic Rites; 65,000 to March.

Church Leaders, Ritchie to View Celebration of Tercentenary.

Baltimore, May 28 (Spl.).—Between 12,000 and 15,000 Washingtonians are expected in Baltimore on Wednesday to attend the military mass at the Baltimore Stadium marking the Catholic church's celebration of Maryland's tercentenary and the one-hundredth anniversary of the birth of Cardinal Gibbons.

In addition, thousands from western Maryland, the southern counties and other districts will swell the huge crowd which is expected to jam the big bowl.

The Baltimore Catholic Review, official weekly newspaper of the archdiocese of Baltimore, estimates that at least 100,000 persons will view the mass, which will be conducted by Archbishop Michael J. Curley. At least 65,000 members of Catholic orders and societies and pupils in parochial schools are expected to march in a mammoth parade prior to the mass.

Special Trains from Capital.

To accomodate the out-of-town visitors, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and the Pennsylvania Railroad will run special trains to Baltimore from Washington and special cars will be attached to trains coming in from western Maryland and southern Maryland. Bus lines also will run special coaches to the city.

Greetings from President Roosevelt to the assembly will be read in the stadium by Archbishop Curley. The apostolic delegate, Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, will convey the blessing of Pope Pius.

The entire ceremony will be broadcast by the NBC network and there will be amplifying apparatus in the stadium to carry the words of the speakers to every one in the bowl.

Archbishop Curley will celebrate the mass with a tabernacle on the altar which is said to have been used by Father Andrew White in the first mass celebrated on Maryland soil, on March 25, 1634.

The mammoth parade is scheduled to begin at 9:30 a. m. It will

White Sox Pound Four Nat Pitchers to Register 11 to 7 Triumph

Capital Team Loses Early Lead

5-Run Rally, Topped by Manush's Homer, Fails to Net Victory.

Bonura, Appling Hit for Circuit for Sox; Nats Fail in Pinches.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post.)

COMISKEY PARK, Chicago, May 28.—The White Sox recovered their sock this afternoon and shook the Nats loose from a ball game played to rat-a-tat-tat of singles and doubles and the booming of home runs and triples. The score was, roughly, 11 to 7. Among the Washington casualties was the hitting streak of Cecil Travis, who couldn't get a ball out of the infield and went hitless for the first time of his last 20 games.

The Nats were trying to stop the Chicago slugging with a lot of five-and-ten pitching that surrendered 17 solid socks to White Sox, including such devastating items as a pair of home runs.

It was a ball game for only four innings. By that time the Sox had blasted Tommy Thomas out of the premises and were fattening their batting averages off the lath-like Jack Russell, who, as a relief pitcher, left relief still to be desired by the Nats.

Nats Take Lead in Third.

But the Nats were in the ball game at one point of the proceedings, having rallied to the extent of five runs against old Ted Lyons back in the third inning, to take a 5-to-3 lead. Heinie Manush's home run was the pivotal blow this uprising, but Thomas and Russell pitched thereafter as if they had the Sox' best interests at heart.

By the end of the fifth inning, the Nats were confronted with a 10-5 deficit, which illustrates the speed with which Thomas and Russell dissipated their lead, and thereafter it was a case of endless frustration against the pitching of Lyons, who, with men on bases, was tighter than a penniless Scotchman.

So, the Nats quit the West with nine victories and seven defeats to show for the 16-game tour.

Bonura Breaks Fast.

Squat and chunky Zeke Bonura, the Sox first baseman who has been hitless in his last four games, came out of his batting slump with a dramatic gesture in the first inning to present Lyons with a three-run lead when he rifled a homer into the left center field bleachers after Bordagaray and Haas had pricked the Thomas bubble with a pair of singles.

Manush put the Nats back in the ball game in the third after singles by Thomas and Myer and Boken's error on Kuhel's grounder had sent one Washington run across the plate. With two mates still on the paths, Manush cracked his homer into the right-field pavilion seats to boost the Nat's lead to 4-1. They upped it to 5-1 in the same inning after Boken had made his second error of the session on Travis' grounder. Schulte's single scored Travis.

Thomas Knocked Out.

Thomas ran smack into a home run by Appling that started the Chicago third and then he encountered a trying session in the fourth. Bordagaray got the third of his straight singles and, with one out, Thomas filled the bases on a pair of passes. Cronin dispatched him to the showers and called in Jack Rusell, who solved the situation by permitting Appling a long fly that scored one run, by surrendering a two-base hit to Dykes that scored another, and by yielding a single to Bob Boken that scored two more runs. By that time the Sox had an 8-5 lead.

Russell was still a dismal failure in the fifth and he had to have help from Alec McColl to get the side out. With two out, Haas and Bonura singled and Simmons brought 'em home with a double before McColl retired Appling and the Sox had upped their lead to 10-5.

Nats Fall in Pinches.

The Nats did manage to get a coupla runs off Lyons in the seventh with the help of Myer's single, Manush's rousing double and Appling's error, but with two on base, Moe Berg grounded out and thereafter they were leaving all kinds of runners on base against Lyons.

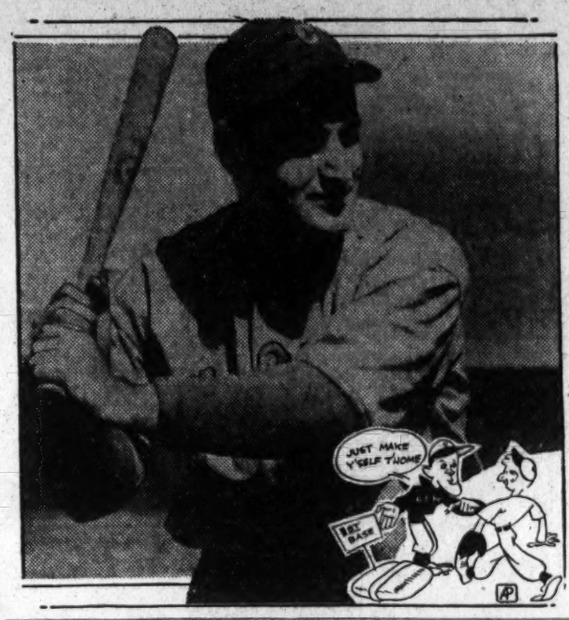
Travis left two mates on the paths when he grounded out in the eighth and Pinch-Hitter Dave Harris struck out in the ninth with two pals on base crying to run.

Wrestlers Suspended For Hitting Referees

Parkersburg, W. Va., May 28 (Spl.).—For various infringements of the rules, including the punching of referees, seven professional wrestlers lately engaging in bouts in different West Virginia cities have been suspended for an indefinite period, according to Fred Cochran, of this city, secretary of the West Virginia Athletic Commission.

They are Jack Domar, Ray Carpenter, Al Trecker, Joe Montana, Bobby Savage, Johnny Carlin and Paddy Mack. Before reinstatement, all must appear before the commission and make amends, Cochran states.

In Thick of Home Run Race



Foxx Hits Two Homers, but Tribe Wins

A's Beaten, 6-5, in Tenths as Averill Doubles Home Winning Run.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 28 (AP).—The league-leading Indians beat Philadelphia in a ten-inning game, 6 to 5, today when Averill's double scored Knickerbocker with the wining run. The victory gave Cleveland a clean sweep of the three-game series.

Foxx led the Athletic's attack with two home runs, his tenth and eleventh of the season. In the first inning he hit the first ball pitched over the right field fence, scoring Warstler. Foxx's high drive in the third inning hit the right field wall, took a freak bounce, and before it could be retrieved the Philadelphia first baseman had made the rounds, again scoring Warstler.

Seventh for Averill.

Earl Averill, Cleveland center fielder, smacked out his seventh home run of the season over the right field fence in the first inning.

The victory was the Indian's eighth in 11 games against the Eastern invaders. They jumped into rst place Sunday when the Yankee's were beaten by the Browns.

Tigers Nip Red Sox; Grove PoundedOut

Greenberg's 2 Homers Aid in 12-to-6 Victory.

Detroit, May 28 (AP).—Two homers off the bat of Hank Greenberg, Detroit's heavy-hitting first baseman, and doubles by other members of the squad, today gave the Tigers a 12-to-6 victory over the Boston Red Sox and a clean sweep for the three-game series.

Neither Frasier nor Grove, who started the pitching for their respective clubs, was able to finish. The Tigers sent Grove to the showers in the sixth after having touched him for 11 safeties. Frasier lasted four innings, when he was supplanted by Marberry. Henry Johnson finished for the Red Sox.

Greenberg led the Detroit scoring, his circuit blows acounting for four runs. Timely hitting by Hayworth, Gehringer and Goslin, other Tiger faithfuls, augmented the Detroit margin.

Giants Win Two On Homers by Jackson

24 (746 See Bucs Bow in 1th, 3-2, and by 1-0 in Nightcap Game.

NEW YORK, May 28 (AP).—With Travis Jackson's home runs deciding the issue in both games, the New York Giants knocked the Pittsburg Pirates out of first place in the National League standings today as they swept a double-header. The world champions won the first game, 3 to 2, in 11 innings, and the night cap, 1 to 0.

Both games were exhibitions of fine pitching. In the first, Hal Schumacher and Adolfo Luque outpointed Larry French. In the second, Carl Hubbell shaded Ralph Birkofer for his second shutout and seventh victory of the season. The triumph sent the Giants into third place, above the Cubs, while the Cardinals took the lead.

Cards Score To Lead in National

Shut Out Phils, 10 to 0, Behind Hallahan's Fine Pitching.

Hurler Fans Side After Two Hits Give Phils Their Only Threat.

PHILADELPHIA, May 28 (AP).—Behind the shut-out pitching of Bill Hallahan, the St. Louis Cardinals pounded out a 10-to-0 victory over the Phillies today in the final game of the series. The victory put the Cards in first place in the National League.

Although he walked five men and allowed seven hits, Hallahan was in danger of being scored on only once when Bartell's single and J. Moore's double put men on second and third and no one out. He fanned the next three men with ease, however. The Phillies made five double-plays during the day.

Auto Classic Field of 33 Assured

Frame Is Forced Out by Damaged Car; Driver Is Not Injured.

100,000 Are Expected to See Race; Meyer Defends Crown.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 28 (AP).—A starting field of 33 cars was assured today for the twenty-second annual 500-mile race to be run Wednesday over the Indianapolis motor speedway course.

The time trials were completed late this afternoon and the rail birds went home to roost until race day. The course will be closed tomorrow so that workmen can put the huge plant in shape for the speed spectacle that each year lures within the gates a throng of more than 100,000 thrill seekers.

Thirty-one gasoline cars and two propelled by oil-burning engines comprise the field for the Memorial Day classic. In accordance with speedway rules, all of the contestants have demonstrated during the time trials that their cars are capable of averaging over 100 miles per hour.

Pleased by the crowds that have turned out to witness the time trials during the two week-ends, Col. E. V. Rickenbacker, president of the speedway, predicted that the forthcoming race would be witnessed by the greatest number of spectators in many years.

The list of competing drivers this year includes many names familiar to race fans. Among them is Louis Meyer, of South Gate, Calif., winner of the event in 1928 and again in 1933.

In the pole position, a place he earned by making the fastest time on the first day of the qualifying runs, will be Kelly Petillo, diminutive Californian.

Fred Frame, of Los Angeles, winner in 1931, was elminated as a possible starter by a mishap during his attempt to qualify this morning. The left steering arm of his car broke while he was coming out of a curve into the stretch and his speedster, out of control, went crashing into a wall. Frame and his riding companion, Al Thieson, of Dayton, Ohio, escaped injury but the car was so damaged that its repair before closing time of the time trials was impossible.

Lamar Wins Marathon.

Frederick, Md., May 28 (Spl.).—William Lemar, Cumberland sprinter, won the 15-mile marathon race between Brunswick and Frederick yesterday in 1 hour 44 minutes 30 seconds.

He was followed by Tony Wagner, local colored runner, who completed the distance in 1 hour 49 minutes. Charles (Speed) Schamel, Brunswick, was third.

Betty Keeler Takes Duel By 1 Up

BETTY KEELER, recently crowned District women's municipal golf champion, forged into the semifinals of the annual West Potomac spring tournament yesterday by defeating Frances Bailey, 1 up, in a thrilling match. Three up at the turn, Miss Keeler watched Miss Bailey even the match at the sixteenth. Miss Keeler won the seventeenth, to go 1 up again, and sank a 4-footer on the home green for a half in 4. Miss Keeler shot a 76 and Miss Bailey a 79.

Ellen Kincaid, another favorite, automatically went into the semifinals after drawing a bye. She defeated Hope Wilkinson, defending champion, 1 up, in her first-round match.

In the men's tournament, G. H. Osborne, who set a new 9-hole course record Friday when he shot a 26, clipping 1 stroke off Claude Rippy's previous mark, entered the semifinals along with J. H. Barrow and E. Pomykala. Barrow created the big upset by eliminating the defending champion, J. H. Messick, 2 and 1.

4,000 Fans See Gloritone Win Feature as Charles Town Meeting Opens

D. C.-Owned Horse Up By Nose

Day Perfect for Racing, With Valley Track Lightning Fast.

Grace Bunting Winners of Belvedere; Morocen Pays $19.20.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent).

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., May 28.—Hoss racing, conducted a la cold storage here last December, returned to this beautiful hill country, just west of the Blue Ridge Mountains, under ideal conditions. Before an enthusiastic crowd of some 4,000, the majority from the National Capital, the Washington-owned Gloritone won the feature race. Installed the favorite despite the presence in the saddle of one E. Dennis, who had ridden in only one other race, Gloritone won by a scant nose in a three-horse finish which would have done Belmont, Pimlico or Hileah Park proud.

Martin Flynn, the owner, forgave young Dennis for running his horse to the outside fence at the first turn, for the boy certainly made up for that error in the stretch. In the last stride he got his mount up to defeat Manager Bill and Chatterfol. So close were the three that the crowd had to await the posting of the numbers to separate them.

Field of Five Competes.

The scratching of Scotty Don left a field of five in the feature, over 6½ furlongs. Chatterfol, Dearzin and Manager Bill began a battle for the pace-setting honors as the group went to the first turn. Gloritone was a poor last and then took the swing to the far outside. Dearzin dropped out of it on the back stretch, while Chatterfol clung to a slight advantage over Manager Bill.

Rounding the far turn, Gloritone found her stride and gradually cut down the distance between her and the leading pair. At the sixteenth pole, Chatterfol and Manager Bill were running a near dead-heat in front of the fast-closing Gloritone. The mare came on with her rush to nip Manager Bill just at the wire.

Those who play hunches cashed a bet on the Shirley Povich Purse, named in honor of The Washington Post sports editor. A son of Morvich won the Povich. Hhe was Morocen, ridden by Sam Palumbo, and he had a length and a half advantage over Modern Times. Third money went to Aella, the favorite.

Sea Finn Pays $191.60.

Charles Town, which earned a reputation as a long-shot track last winter, was not long in returning to form. While Hurdy Gurdy, winner of the first race, paid a rather ordinary $12.40 mutuel, Sea Finn, which finished second, supplied a $191.60 place mutuel. The colt would have paid $188 to 1 had he been able to hold his lead.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Charles Town, May 28.

Dear Al:

The president of the local chamber of commerce was right. Last December, he was around the pressbox, pounding his feet and pulling his head down into the collar of his overcoat and saying that Jefferson County weather was ideal in the late spring and early summer. We admit that we have to agree if today was a sample. The sun was doing his stuff, the grass and trees were setting a new high for a deep shade of green and the Blue Ridge Mountains rolled along in all their glory to landscape the backstretch. But, I can't say I'll love it in December as I do in May.

BILL.

First race—Little Wackie ran well over at Hagerstown and, despite the fact that top weight has been assigned this one, should take care of this field. Shaggy Ann and Trycook, the latter the famous $810 shot at Hagerstown, to take care of the others.

Second race—Niggertoe won a sprint here last winter and has shown good form this spring. Ran well at Pimlico and then went on to take a purse at Hagerstown. He will have Lodorous and Star Queen to beat.

Third race—Bokie B. is not the good plater that he once was, but retains a certain amount of speed. Enough, I should say, to take care of this group. Burleigh for the place. Fair Clark is last on the also eligible list and is dangerous if he gets in action.

Fourth race—Vacillate has gone back but if h can not get home in front of this caliber of horseflesh he should keep running right over to the Shenandoah River and dive in. Race Street is another which has seen better days. Round Bend is an upset possibility.

Fifth race—Jobs Dido was prepared for a killing once this spring but was away to a bad start. Has been sharpened up and Clocker Mike reports a fair trial. I'm going to try to upset the talent with this fellow. Hacky H. has shown little of his old form of late but has to be respected among this kind. Busy Ike for the show.

Sixth race—Rhodius breaks from No. 1 post position and may lead from the start. Noras Grace and Fair Billy are both speedy. Steelton has a fighting chance but prefers the longer route.

Seventh race—Thermopylae is in clever hands. Has been groomed for a crack down and this may be the spot. Solace and Zombro to hold the others safe.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HURDY GURDY, $12.40, $5.60, $4.60; SEA FINN, $191.60, $22.40; DISRUPTION, $27.80.

HURDY GURDY, away forwardly and having good speed, was rated behind the pace of the leaders until turning for home, circled the leaders when turned into the stretch and was drawing away at finish. SEA FINN had good early speed, wore down CANOBIE LAKE on the back stretch, drew into what appeared to be a safe margin, but could not withstand the challenge of the winner. DISRUPTION, close up at al times, closed well.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:37. Off at 2:43. Winner, H. C. Vaughan's ch. f. (4), by Bunting—Grace Note. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $200; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:22.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRACE BUNTING, $35.80, $3.80, $3.60; HANDLEY, $4.80, $4.20; MORDROM, $6.80.

GRACE BUNTING had good early speed to set the pace, saved ground throughout, stalled off the repeated challenges of HANDLEY, but had to be kept under pressure at the finish. HANDLEY, closest to the pacemaker at all times, made a bid for supremacy in the stretch, but could not get up under punishment. MORDROM raced forwardly at all times, but was stopping at the end.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:10. Off at 3:13. Winner, Mrs. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MOROCEN, $19.20, $5.80, $4.20; MODERN TIMES, $4.80, $3.60; AELLA, $4.00.

MOROCEN, away forwardly, was knocked back at the first turn, gradually improved his position, circled the leaders when entering the stretch and was drawing away at the finish. MODERN TIMES, reserved from the early pace, responded well when called upon, colsed a good gap, but was not good enough. AELLA, had early speed, set the pace, raced MAZYNIATA into submission, but was tiring at the end.

FOURTH RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, 300. For 3-year-olds and upward. ‡Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:39. Off at 3:43. Winner, R. A. Russell's b. g. (3), by Bunting—Pitti. Trained by W. Grater. Value to winner, $200; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:01 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DECORATE, $3.80, $3.00, $2.60; GOLDEN VEIN, $5.20, $3.60; MISS PATCHES, $19.80.

DECORATE, away forwardly and having good speed, was rated behind the pace of the leaders until turning for home, circled the leaders when turned into the stretch and was drawing away at finish. GOLDEN VEIN, closest to the pace at all times and racing on the outside, made a bid to reach the leader in the stretch and was wearing him down. MISS PATCHES, a forward factor a.tal times, raced evenly, but could not get to leaders.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:07. Off at 4:10. Winner, M. Finn's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GLORITONE, $4.80, $3.60, $2.20; MANAGER BILL, $3.80, $2.40; CHATTERFOL, $2.20.

GLORITONE, slow to find her best speed, trailed the field until reaching the back stretch, was gradually while under restraint, circled the leaders when straightened into stretch and, under vigorous urging, was up in final strides. MANAGER BILL, rated off the pace of CHATTERFOL gained a slight lead in stretch, but could not withstand the winner. CHATTERFOL had good early speed, saved ground throughout and hung on well.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:39. Off at 4:41. Winner, W. M. Hunt's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ARAB, $9.00, $2.40, $2.80; LITTLE STOKES, $2.20, $2.20; POST BRIGADE, $2.80.

ARAB took command after the first turn, was rated in front on the rail and had to be hard urged to offset the bid of LITTLE STOKES. The latter, slow to find his best speed, was rated off the pace on the rail, colsed very fast and would have won in another stride. POST BRIGADE, colse to the early pace, faltered in the final eighth mile. TRENTONIAN, always a forward factor, could not improve his position. NO MISTAKE raced evenly. ARMAGEDDON could never get up.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:11. Off at 5:13. Winner, J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JAMABALYA, $9.20, $4.40, $3.00; McDONALD H., $3.80, $2.80; SISKO, $4.60.

JAMBAYLA, away forwardly, easily took command when straightened on the back stretch, was rated in front for the balance of the race and drew out easily in the stretch. McDONALD H., well up throughout, could not reach the winner when put to a drvie. SISKO, reserved in the early part, closed well. DARK STAR, a trailer in the early stages, colsed a good gap. HELEN'S ALIBI could never get up. SOLACE could not improve his position.

Stocks Persist In Advancing On Quiet Sales

Average Is Up Six-tenths as Turnover Totals 611,870 Shares.

New York, May 28 (AP).—Stocks lagged behind the soaring grain market today, but crept ahead quietly in continuation of the previous slow advance.

While speculators shifted into grains for real action, trading remained at low ebb on the stock exchange. Sales totaled 611,870 shares, only a modest improvement over the preceding two full sessions.

As wheat leaped the 5-cent limit allowed for one session in the Chicago pit, shares of companies dependent chiefly upon farmer purchasing power attracted moderate buying. J. I. Case got up more than 2 points at one time. Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck and International Harvester added fractions to their gains of last week.

Stocks Six-tenths Up.

The average price of 90 stocks closed six-tenths of a point higher at 78.1, the fourth consecutive session of creeping advance. Industrial shares on the average returned to approximately the tops of the recent rally from the May low levels.

The dollar pursued an uneventful course against foreign exchanges.

Sugar shares, gold stocks, a few preferred shares and specialties, aside from the farm group, contributed the largest gains to the share list. American Sugar Refining extended its advance more than 2 points. Other sugar shares also attracted buying as announcement from Washington was waited on insular quotas under the recently approved sugar bill.

Among Strong Spots.

Strong spots, with net gains of 1 to 3 points, included DuPont, Cudahy Packing, American Snuff preferred, Columbia Pictures, Minneapolis Honeywell Register, Union Bag & Paper, and Auburn Auto.

Small buying was sufficient to lift prices in face of the thinness of the market. American Can, Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, General Electric, and others picked up fractional gains in line with the market generally.

Agreement between the Senate-House conferees on the stock exchange control bill, easing of strike tension in Toledo and modification of NRA rule over service industries contributed to a mild early show of strength in the stock market, but did not arouse speculation from its inertia. Attention was fixed on the grain market as it resumed its advance.

Trade news was more reassuring, for it indicated resistance to seasonal influences toward recession. The American Iron & Steel Institute's weekly estimate of steel operations showed an unexpected gain of 1.9 points to 56.1 per cent of capacity, within less than a point of the recent peak. Recovery in steel production was attributed to special influences, the St. Paul and the Santa Fe railroads reported further gains in carloadings last week, while Chesapeake & Ohio's loadings dropped a little.

Announcement of the new Armour of Illinois recapitalization plan started profit-taking. The preferred closed a point lower. Electric Auto-Lite rallied more than a point on improvement in the Toledo situation.

Foreign Markets.

May 28 (A.P.).—London—The advance in the price of gold bullion and the favorable mining outlook attracted increased buying of gold mining shares on the stock exchange today. German bonds were firmer and rubber stock remained steady. The tendency otherwise was easy and the market closed irregular.

Paris—Prices on the bourse fluctuated within narrow limits and declined near the close. Rentes were weak, while South African gold mining issues were strong. The closing tone was irregular.

Berlin—A friendlier tendency was shown on the bourse today, but prevailing quietness resulted in a dull closing.

Wool Market.

Boston, May 28 (A.P.) (U. S. Department of Agriculture).—Prices asked on medium fleeces offered here from the country are firmer as a result of the higher prices reported in producing section. Country packed medium wool from Ohio and Michigan are fairly firm at around 31 cents in the grease, delivered East, compared with 30 cents, at which carload lots could be bought one to two weeks ago. Estimated receipts of domestic wools at Boston during week ending May 26 were 2,048,700 pounds, compared with 1,836,600 the previous week.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Conference Report on Stock Exchange Bill Is Viewed as "Workable," but Certain to Cause Much Shrinkage in Trading.

By Ralph West Robey.

Many people still have rather grave misgivings on the possible effects of the security exchange bill as it will come from the Senate and House conference today. At the same time it is almost universally agreed that it is a "workable" measure. For this reason there is comparatively little disposition left to quarrel further with the act. It is such a marked improvement over the first two drafts of the bill—the first of which quite probably in effect would have closed our exchanges—that it is viewed as a victory for those desirous of having the measure merely reform security trading over those who apparently wanted to eliminate such trading entirely.

Such reservations as remain in supporting the bill arise from a skepticism of how it will be administered. Within the act ample powers remain to enable the board to subject American business to a degree of regulation that could not be classed as "reform." Many who have followed the course of the New Deal for the first year with its constant reaching out for more and ever more power, do not relish having such provisions in the statutes. At the same time they recognize that with intelligent and sympathetic administration the act may well become a major progressive step.

Is Unlikely That Act Will Cause Much Selling.

From the point of view of immediate effects the most important consideration is to what extent, if at all, it will cause further liquidation. Upon this there is little unanimity of opinion. Some believe a rather large amount of readjustment will be necessary in order to bring the market as a whole in harmony with the new margin requirements. Others are equally positive that there is no significant amount of this left to be done, such liquidation as necessary having been taking place gradually for several weeks past.

On the whole it appears that the latter group has the better case. The provisions of the act on margin requirements, because of the alternative possibilities offered, probably are little if any above what currently is required by the houses in the Street. Further, these provisions do not go into effect until October 1 in the case of new accounts and not until July 1, 1937, on loans now outstanding. At most, therefore, such liquidation as is involved will be the result of houses requiring margins to be increased to the statutory requirement, even though such increases are not mandatory under the law.

Heavy Reduction of Personnel Expected.

As to the effect of the act on the volume of trading, and consequently upon the number of employes in brokerage houses, there is much greater uniformity of opinion. Almost everyone agrees that the volume will be reduced by a substantial extent, at least during the formative period of the regulation. Later, it is felt, it may be found that the administration of the act is of such a character that trading again will increase to sizable proportions.

Estimates of the amount of reduction of personnel run as high as 20 to 25 per cent. This is for the number that will be discharged outright. In addition it is expected that many houses will adopt a stagger system for their remaining employes, making them take one week off out of every month. From the point of view of our financial districts this means a serious problem. Personnels already have been reduced heavily in these centers and the addition of another large group means the aggravation of an unemployment situation that long ago became distressing.

Visible Supply U. S. Grain.

New York, May 28 (A.P.).—The visible supply of American grain shows the following changes in bushels: Wheat decreased 990,000; corn decreased 1,373,000; oats decreased 1,219,000; rye decreased 743,000; barley decreased 371,000.

Goods Markets.

New York, May 28 (A.P.).—Cotton goods markets were firm but very quiet today. Rayon yarns sold in moderate lots for June delivery. The hearing on antitrust charges before the Federal Trade Commission was further continued today until Thursday. Silk goods were in light demand for immediate cutting. Burlaps showed no change. Wool dress goods and coatings sold moderately for fall.

Bond Prices Display Steady To Firm Tone

Market Rises Two-tenths as Transfers Decline to $8,693,000.

New York, May 28 (AP).—The bond market, as a whole, displayed a steady to firm tone today, although trading was extremely dull and most of the gains notably small.

Transfers of $8,693,000, par value, compared with $12,071,000 last Friday. The average for 60 domestic corporate issues advanced two-tenths of a point to 86.

There was a fair demand in the railway department as current freight car loadings and earnings indicated improvement in some lines of shipping. Prime investment utilities and industrials also were either unchanged or slightly higher.

Labor Situation Better.

Easing of the labor situation in Toledo engendered some optimism.

Union Pacific first 4s edged up to a new high for the past several years and Burlington general 4s passed their old record top. Other modest gainers in the transportation list included some liens of Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake Corporation, Chicago & North Western, Colorado & Southern, Great Northern, N. Y. Central, Nickel Plate, Pennsylvania, Southern and Delaware & Hudson.

Among the better bonds in the other divisions were those of American & Foreign Power, Colon Oil, General Steel Castings, Hudson Coal, International Telephone, McKesson, North American, St. Joseph Lead and United Drug.

U. S. Loans Easier.

The majority of U. S. Government securities were a trifle easier, but the turnover here amounted to only about $1,000,000. Dealers believed that any Treasury announcement of a larger long-term bond offering for June 15, probably will be made the latter part of this week.

In the meantime followers of the Federal department were showing a preference for the sidelines.

Italian Kingdom 7s lost 2⅞ points following reports that the Rome government would tighten exchange restrictions. The Belgians were a bit heavy, but elsewhere in the foreign section fluctuations were generally unimportant.

Curb's Prices Rise Again in Light Trading

Fractional Gains Prevail as Sales Mount to 138,000 Shares.

New York, May 28 (AP).—Moderately higher levels ruled at the finish of the curb market today. Improvement was largely fractional, although a number of specialties gained a point or so. Oils, metals and utilities were prominent among the gainers. Volume continued light.

International Petroleum was heavily traded at a point advance, while similar advances were recorded by National Sugar, which advanced in sympathy with firmness of the sugar group on the big board. Aluminum Co. of America, Hiram Walker, New Jersey Zinc, Swift International and Sherwin Williams also ended around a point higher.

Lesser gains were recorded by American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Lake Shore, Hollinger Gold, Standard Oil of Indiana, Tech Hughes, Wright Hargraves and Humble Oil.

Transfers approximated 138,000 shares compared with last Friday's record low of 102,000.

London Oversubscribes 50 Million Canada Loan

London, May 28 (AP).—The new Canadian $50,000,000 loan offered today was an immediate success, the lists closing an hour and a half after the opening.

The loan was very largely oversubscribed, but this did not affect prices on the gilt-edged market.

The issue, in 3¼ per cent bonds, was made at a price of 96½.

C. & O. Freight Loads Drop to 28,415 Cars

New York, May 28 (AP).—Carloadings on the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad totaled 28,415 cars in the week ended May 26, the system reported today. This compared with 29,472 cars in the preceding week and with 25,534 in the corresponding week a year ago.

Foreign Debt Collection Stand Raises Doubts on U. S. Policy

By Anna P. Youngman.

"It is impossible to understand what the Americans have gained by insisting upon demanding that which they know perfectly well they can not get," says an editorial writer in Le Temps.

The reference is to our abortive and bungling attempts to collect on war debt account from countries that have long since decided that they can not or will not pay the amounts due under the debt funding agreements. Some of the debtors have followed the example of France and defaulted outright. Others, like Great Britain, have made small token payments in order to leave the path open for subsequent negotiation.

Under the Johnson act, however, the latter group of countries will not be able in the future to escape the stigma of default by continuing to make these token payments. Consequently, it seems highly probable that Great Britain and those countries that follow her lead will make no payment at all on June 15. The United States will then be confronted by a more or less united group of resentful debtors less disposed to make concessions than they would have been had requests for debt revison received consideration at an earlier date.

Last June strong sentiment in favor of outright default was expressed by the British financial press, but the desire to avoid any action which might jeopardize the success of the London monetary conference strengthened the arguments advanced in favor of making another token payment. The later collapse of the conference and the passage of the Johnson act have shown the futility of making another "gesture," however, and increased the likelihood of an outright default this time.

The French defend their refusal to make payments by pointing out that the Hoover moratorium led to suspension of reparations and to the Lausanne accord which cut German payments over 90 per cent. As a result, they feel justified in refusing to make payments to the United States and the British government, pending a general revision of international political debts. The British, however, base their objections to payment chiefly on the difficulties of transferring the annuities, although they, too, have political arguments to advance against nonfulfillment of the contract.

The fact that the British treasury has a budgetary surplus does not invalidate an argument based on the difficulties of transferring payments after they have been collected. Resumption of these transfers would turn the balance of international payments heavily against Great Britain, and tend to depress the exchange value of the pound in terms of dollars. If all our debtors were to attempt to transfer several hundred millions of dollars yearly on debt account, the tendency would be to drive up the value of the dollar in terms of other currencies—a result that would conflict directly with our present monetary policies.

The question arises, then, as to whether we can afford to be paid even under the fantastic assumption that the debtors might consent to make large annual payments. Certainly, we do not wish to see the dollar appreciate in the exchange markets.

Yet dollars must be bought if we insist upon these payments. The only other alternatives open to our debtors are to ship gold to us or acquire additional dollar credits by selling us more goods. Gold shipments could, of course, be made by Great Britain and France for a time, but it seems sheer stupidity for the debtor states to permit the United States to amass vast quantities of sterile gold and clean out their metallic reserves, thus destroying the hope of a return to stable monetary conditions for an indefinite period of time. Finally it is certain that we would not permit a country, such as Great Britain, to sell to us several times the amount of the goods that we now import without offsetting exports.

To sum up, we can not expect to be paid, it we reject every feasible proposal for enabling payments to be made, and discuss the debt problem as if it were a political or moral question. If Congress insists upon maintaining this attitude, which finds expression in the Johnson act, we may end by obtaining nothing from our debtors instead of receiving the modest sums that they might be induced to pay under revised settlements.

New York, May 28 (AP).—The Electric Power & Light Corporation reports net loss for the 12 months ending March 31, of $1,502,264, after all charges, compared with net income in the 12 months ending March 31, 1933, of $2,907,801, equal to $3.89 a share on combined $7 preferred and $6 preferred stocks.

For the calendar year ended December 31, 1933, consolidated net loss was $2,126,251, after all charges, contrasted with net income in 1932 of $4,758,388, equal to $6.17 a share on the combined preferred stocks.

The Devoe & Reynolds Co. has declared the usual extra dividend of 25 cents and the regular quarterly of 25 cents on the Class A and B common shares, both dividends are payable July 1 to stock of records June 20.

The American I. G. Chemical Corporation reported today net earnings for the fiscal year ended March 31 of $1,320,325, equivalent to 17 cents a share on its B common stock, compared with $1,345,621, or 16 cents a share on the B common, for the previous fiscal year.

Earnings were equal to $1.68 a share on the A common, compared with $1.58 the previous year.

Directors of the Houdaille Hershey Corporation have ordered a dividend of $1.25 on the Class A preference stock, payable June 12 to stock of record June 7. Dividends on the stock are cumulative at the rate of $2.50 annually. The previous payment was made April 1, 1932.

Total gross operating revenues of $95,482,998 for the 12 months ended April 30 were reported today by Associated Gas & Electric System. This total is slightly more than that reported for the previous 12 months due principally to increased sales of electricity which helped to offset declines in other departments.

Operating expenses, maintenance, &c., were $47,787,652, an increase of $1,798,253, or 4 per cent above the previous year.

Taxes jumped to $10,838,042, an increase of $2,764,813, or 34 per cent above last year's figure. This is more than 11 per cent of total operating revenues. A year ago taxes were 8 per cent of total revenues, which illustrates the speed with which they are mounting up.

After deducting these items, net operating revenue remained at $36,857,304, which is $4,322,606, or 10 per cent below a year ago. Provision for retirement of fixed capital of $8,242,323 left operating income of $28,614,981, a drop of 19 per cent below the corresponding figure for the 12 months ended April 30, 1933.

Wheat Climbs 5-Cent Limit To New High

Hot Weather and Drought Aid Prices; All Grains Record Gains.

Chicago, May 28 (AP).—In whirlwind buying rushes today, wheat, corn, barley and oats each overtopped season high-price records, wheat jumping 5 cents and almost hitting $1 a bushel.

Temperatures that soared to 106 in the Dakotas and 100 in Canada, with nearly complete absence of moisture throughout domestic spring wheat territory, came as a surprise to most traders, indications over the week-end having pointed to possible general break-up of drought this week.

On the contrary, today's forecasts pointed to little or no relief for drought conditions that for extent and severity were declared by some authorities to be without precedent in the United States.

Wheat closed excited at the maximum 5-cent advance allowed for a single day, with oats and barley both also at the maximum permitted. The close in wheat was 4⅞ to 5 cents up, compared with Saturday's finish; corn, 3¼ to 3⅝ advanced; oats, 2⅞ to 3⅛ gain, and provisions showing a rise of 7 to 17 cents.

Jumps of more than 2 cents a bushel in wheat took place before trading had progressed hardly a minute. Then came successive wild bulges to above 3 cents, later 4 cents, and finally just before the end of trading the market feverishly went skyward to the full amount that regulations permitted, 5 cents.

Unremitting strength and broad active dealings characterized the wheat market throughout, with only brief slight reactions due to profit-taking, and with all offerings readily absorbed.

Extreme seriousness of the drought was illustrated by reports that rainfall so far this month at Bismarck, N. Dak., totaled but .08 of an inch, against a normal of 1.52 inches; Huron, S. Dak., .65, against normal of 2.45, and Helena, Mont., .34, compared with normal of 1.82.

Innumerable crop damage advices meanwhile overwhelmed the trade, and included official statements from Nebraska that drought effects ranked with the worst in the State's history.

Special attention was given to a dispatch from a Chicago expert, saying that for 200 miles from Mitchell, S. Dak., to Ellendale, N. Dak., crops were a total failure and would not now be benefited by rains.

Corn, oats and other grains all responded to the buoyancy of wheat prices and to sensational crop damage done, especially to oats. Corn reached quotations equivalent to 45 cents a bushel on farms, enabling sales at a profit over amounts obtained on Government loans.

Despite weakness of hog values, provisions advanced with grains.

Canada Imports More Plate Glass

March Receipts Are Valued at $93,220, Far Above 1933.

Imports of plate glass from the United States into Canada have shown notable improvement during the current year, according to a report from Consul Damon C. Woods, Toronto, made public by the Commerce Department. Plate glass, it is pointed out, is the most important item entering into the glass and glassware trade of the United States with the Dominion.

Receipts during March, 1934, were valued at $93,320, compared with $39,041 in March, 1933, and $47,658 in February, 1934. Plate glass imports from the United Kingdom in March, 1934, were valued at $49,490, against $13,808 in March of last year.

In the 12 months ended March, 1934, imports of glass and glassware into Canada had a total value of $4,363,249, against $4,069,147 in the preceding 12-month period. Of the totals, the United States supplied, in the respective periods, $2,440,371, against $2,241,144, followed by the United Kingdom, with $845,268, against $502,921.

Africa's Output Of Diamonds Cut

Although output and sales of the diamond mining industry of South Africa declined during 1933, as compared with the preceding year, owing to the higher prices obtained, receipts increased by 25 per cent, according to a report from the American consulate-general, Johannesburg, made public by the Commerce Department.

Total production in the Union during 1933 amounted to 508,552.64 metric carats of an estimated value of £1,560,404, while the total sales were 646,044 metric carats with a value of £1,923,847. These figures compare with a total production in 1932 of 789,382.20 carats of an estimated value of £1,679,600, and total sales of 867,872.71 carats for £1,522,-

South Africa's diamond output has been notably reduced during the past six years from the 4,708,-202 carats of total production in 1928, which is a record for some 20 years of recent diamond mining, since then production has steadily declined.

Steel Output Decline Laid To Labor Rifts

Operation of Mills Is Cut to 57 Per Cent; Auto Production Up.

Cleveland, May 28.—Labor dissensions continue the dominating influence in the iron and steel markets, the trend of which is reflected by further moderate reduction in production, steel works operations last week declining 2 points, to 57 per cent, states the magazine Steel.

Specifications from some of the leading consumers have declined because they have been stocking heavily over recent weeks in anticipation of strikes and possible interruption in delivery of material. Automobile parts makers especially have been cautious through fear of being caught with excessive inventories, in the event automobile manufacturers themselves are forced to more serious curtailment in production.

June 16 has now been set by the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers for a strike if its demands for recognition are refused, and this refusal now appears certain. However, the strength of the Amalgamated association is such an uncertain quantity that the industry as a whole entertains no serious misgivings concerning a strike's effectiveness.

Auto Output Gains.

Automobile production last week made a slight gain over the preceding week, and specifications direct from the largest manufacturers increased moderately, enabling sheet and strip makers to improve their operating schedules. At Pittsburgh, sheet mill output rose 5 points, to 80 per cent. In general, the volume of steel specifications received by leading interests for shipment in May approximate the tonnage moved in April.

While railroad purchases in the week were limited mainly to 2,739 tons of rails by the Nickel Plate railroad, rail production at Chicago held at 40 per cent, and releases of material for equipment building and repair showed further improvement. To the effect of the drought in the Western States is attributed a decline in steel demand from agricultural implement builders.

Structural steel awards for the week dropped slightly to 13,680 tons, including 2,500 tons for two buildings in the Rockefeller Center, New York. The Ford Motor Co. is to take bids shortly on 5,000 tons of shapes for a strip mill building at Dearborn, Mich., and the Semet-Solvay Co. on 4,000 tons for a plant to be located either at Baton Rouge, La., or Freeport, Tex. Among the largest structural projects pending are Government dams in Oregon and Washington, bids going in soon on 41,000 tons of steel for the Grand Coulee dam in Washington. The Government is planning 13 more large dams in the Western States.

Scrap Reflects Uncertainties.

Scrap prices continue to reflect the general uncertainties in the market, melters reducing their inventories. Prices at Pittsburgh and Detroit are off 50 cents to $1 a ton, and Steel's iron and steel scrap composite is down 50 cents to $10.71, the lowest point reached since last December.

Pig iron shipments still are on the up-grade, and in the Middle Western States average 20 to 30 per cent over the April tonnage.

This week, June 1, iron and steel producers will open their books for third quarter on practically all products at unchanged prices. Mill quantity extras on plates, shapes and bars probably will go in effect June 1. A revision in the method of quoting boiler tubes contemplates placing prices on a lineal-foot basis, also with some changes in the list of extras.

Steel Piling Advances.

Steel piling was advanced $3 a ton, effective May 25. This was among the increases first announced last April, but due to the large number of outstanding "protections" at the former price it was canceled.

Steel works operations last week in the Pittsburgh district held at 51 per cent; Cleveland, 78; Detroit, 100; New England, 84; Wheeling, 74, and eastern Pennsylvania, 45. They were down 16 points, to 50 per cent, at Buffalo; 2, to 62, Chicago; 1, to 61, Youngstown, and increased 1½, to 55 per cent, at Birmingham.

Tin plate mill operations in the Pittsburgh district again rose 5 points, to 80 per cent, recovering all the ground recently lost, though specifications for tin plate from canmakers still are declining.

Steel's iron and steel price composite holds at $34.77, and the finished steel index, $54.80.

Trail Believed 'Cold' in Fatal VirginiaAttack

3 More Justice Agents Go to Fredericksburg to Help Manhunt.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 28 (Spl.).—Failure of Federal, county and city authorities to make any arrests or definite comments in connection with the murder of Miss Fannie Kurz and brutal beating of her fiance, Milton J. Brown, led today to the belief that the trail of the criminal is "cold." The pair were found last Monday afternoon unconscious in a Confederate trench of the Fredericksburg Battlefield Park.

Three more Department of Justice operatives have been sent from Washington to supplement the two already here.

Solution of the crime now is said to depend upon Brown's recovering sufficiently to give an accurate account of the assault. Physicians report that Brown is showing improvement.

Though Department of Justice operatives refuse to comment on the case, it is known they have questioned a large number of Brown's friends in an effort to learn of a love frustration motive in the crime.

It is persistently rumored that two Quantico marines have been arrested on suspicion of having made the attack at the instigation of a woman.

Government detectives are thought to be concentrating on the jealousy angle, while Fredericksburg police favor the robbery motive.

The Washington men today and yesterday questioned Miss Mildred Whitaker, blonde restaurant waitress; Miss Gertrude De Bruyn, a friend and coworker of Miss Kurz, and Miss Hilda Sullivan, of Stafford. It is thought the trio were quizzed regarding the movements of the assaulted pair for several weeks preceding their attack and concerning their associations in that time.

Two Federal operatives alternately maintain constant vigil over the unconscious victim in the hope that from his delirium may come the remark which will furnish the key to the crime. Members of Brown's family also remain at all times by his bedside.

Brown is said momentarily to have recognized his filling-station employer, Brewer Beckwith, early today.

Thousands of curious have been examining the death gulley. The park's popularity as a scene for lovers' trysts has gone, however.

With feeling running high in this vicinity, the chief of police is said to have instructed his officers what to do in the emergency of a mob storming the jail, should a suspect be jailed here. It is stated that members of the National Guard have been ordered to be in momentary readiness to answer summons, though some of the guardsmen have been heard to refuse to cooperate in prevention of a lynching. "I would rather lead the party giving that fiend his dose," one soldier said.

Authorities are expected to take any arrested suspects to the Alexandria Jail.

Johnson to Join NRA Exercises

Will Attend West Virginia Celebration June 16 With Richberg.

Charleston, W. Va., May 28 (Spl.).—F. Witcher McCullough, State NEC director, announced that Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, has accepted an invitation to participate in the State NRA celebration June 16 here. He will be accompanied by Donald Richberg, general counsel.

President Roosevelt and Secretary of Labor Perkins have been invited to attend.

The celebration, first to be held in commemoration of the first anniversary of the NRA, will be linked with the celebration of the seventy-first anniversary of the founding of the State, which falls on June 20. Gov. H. G. Kump has announced that he will proclaim the day as a general holiday. Business generally will be suspended.

John B. Easton, of Williamson, president of the West Virginia State Federation of Labor, has advised Mr. McCullough that he expects the attendance of John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. Support of labor organizations throughout the State has been pledged.

Farmers to Draw Limestone Wages

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 28 (Spl.).—A new FERA enterprise in West Virginia just announced by E. Wayne Cofindaffer, State rehabilitation director, is the cooperative operation of a series of lime quarries in the central area for the distribution of crushed limestone among sections needing it for growing grasses suitable for the fattening of live stock.

Farmers needing the lime are to be allowed to work in the quarries for payment in quantities of the product equivalent to their wages. Other FERA labor also will be employed.

Crushed limestone is selling in the State at around $5 a ton, entirely too high for many farmers, Cofindaffer states, and the cooperative quarry scheme is expected to distribute the product at around $1. That not needed by participating farmers will be sold to others at that rate.

In the Battle of the Argonne Forest, in which more than a score of American divisions participated, the French and American artillery fired more than 3,400,000 rounds of ammunition. The American forces alone fired more ammunition than was used by both sides during the entire four-year Civil War in America.

Theresa Rewers, of Chicago, lost her baby teeth at an unusually early age, and so was without any teeth at all before her permanent teeth came in. To take care of this emergency she was provided with a set of false ones. When she discards them she will be one of the very few persons who ever discarded false teeth to return to the use of natural teeth.

Strange little creatures that seem to live nowhere except on snow or ice have presented naturalists with a problem that none seems able to answer. These "insects," they are not true insects, are seen nowhere except on snow or ice, and they seem to thrive on it. Nobody knows what they subsist on, or how they live.

Another race of snow-frequenting creatures are the springtails, or Collembola. They live beneath the snow, but come to the surface periodically, especially in warmer temperatures when the air is moist.

With Hook and Line . . .

By Jean Monk.

ONE of the inconveniences of starting on a fishing trip early in the morning, 3 a. m., for instance, is the question of breakfast. It is the same whether you start from Washington or a hotel or rooming house on the fishing field.

Few of us want to fish without smoking, and who wants to smoke so early in the morning without eating? An early breakfast, therefore, is a necessity.

I have made definite arrangements for fishermen at St. Mary's Hotel, Leonardtwn; at Beal's, in the Point Lookout group; and at the Evans' Hotel, Prince Frederick, Md. Early breakfast can be had at all these places.

Soup's On.

I called on Capt. Lomex, proprietor of the St. Mary's Hotel, not many days ago, and he told me that all any fisherman needs to do is to give him a ring the night before, stating the number in the party, and breakfast will be ready at 4 a. m. or earlier. If no appointment has been made, he says just ring the bell. This makes it handy for parties starting for southern Maryland early in the morning.

Parties staying overnight at Beal's (Scotland); Cullison's (Smith Creek) or Capt. Willoughby's (Ridge,) all in the Point Lookout group, can get breakfast any time after 3 o'clock in the morning.

For those going to Solomons, Kenwood Beach (Governor Run), and Brooms Island, arrangements for early breakfast can be made by calling the Evans Hotel the night before or ringing the doorbell after arriving.

The rebuilt pier at Chesapeake Beach has had its baptism of fishing parties. Frank Del Vecchio, veteran fisherman and fishing tackle merchant of Washington, with a number of his regular fishing associates tried their luck off this pier about a week ago. On their first visit they landed six large eels, but the next trip out they returned with six large croakers.

Caught New Fish.

I visited the pier last Sunday afternoon, and although a northeaster was blowing, about 20 large croakers had been caught during the day.

Frank says one of their fish was new to them. They brought it to the Bureau of Fisheries and was told that it was a kingfish-whiting. The whiting, however, is one species and the kingfish is another. They are plentiful along the Atlantic seaboard and many of them are caught every summer by surf-casters. They look something like a small trout and average about 1½ pounds each

C. M. Capper, at Chain bridge, told me that fishermen angling early this season for herring snagged a fish that was a stranger in the upper Potomac. The Bureau of Fisheries revealed its identity. It was an alewife, known to the Government as a menhaden. They swarm by the millions during the summer months and early fall in Chesapeake Bay.

The menhaden (alewife) attains a length of about 15 inches and 1½ pounds in weight. Few of them ever come into the Potomac as far as Chain Bridge. They are a genuine salt water fish.

Menhaden spawn, apparently, in late fall or winter in the upper parts of the bay where the water is brackish. Endless schools of young alewives, fingerling menhaden, can be seen milling around the piles of the piers in the bay in the early spring and summer.

In late October or early November these fish attain their majority and depart for the Atlantic. The next spring they return to the bay in May when the glut herring arrive. Alewives are larger than herring, they are quite frequently mistaken for herring, and they look very much like a snapper bluefish. They are used by hook-and-line fishermen as chum for bluefish.

A fleet of 30 or more large fishing boats (they look like gunboats) steam out of Reedsville, Va., June 15 every year. In a restricted area from Reedsville to Point Lookout these boats, from June 15 till November, take upward of 50,000 tons of these fish from the waters of the Chesapeake Bay. Valuable oil is extracted from them and the remainder is used for fertilizer.

There are many schools of large alewives in the bay at the present time. Capt. R. E. Lee, Shady Side, and Capt. Noah Hazard, Galesville, told me that they "look like shad," the largest they have ever seen. This may mean that we are facing another great chumming season—from about July 15 until well into November.

move through the principal streets of North Baltimore, and will be reviewed by Gov. Ritchie, Mayor Jackson, Archbishop Curley, the apostolic delegate and other members of the Catholic heirarchy.

Processions of the heirarchy and others are scheduled to precede the mass. Eight thousand school children will sing, and at the consecration bugles will be blown, drums will beat, and cannon, manned by members of the 110th Field Artillery, will fire a salute.

First on the program is a sermon by the Rev. Dr. Peter Guilday, professor of church history at the Catholic University in Washington. He is the author of many historical volumes on the Catholic Church. He is expected to review the history of the Catholics in Maryland and the manner in which they have influenced the history of the Nation.

Distinguished Visitors Listed.

Members of the heirarchy who will attend are Archbishop John T. McNicholas, of Cincinnati; Bishop Patrick Barry, of St. Augustine; Bishop John J. Swint, of Wheeling, W. Va.; Bishop M. K. Keyes, of Savannah, Ga.; Bishop Edmund J. Fitzmaurice, of Wilmington, Del.; Bishop Francis P. Keough, of Providence, R. I.; Bishop Emmett M. Walsh, of Charleston, S. C.; Bishop John J. McNamara, auxiliary Bishop, of Baltimore; Bishop Joseph H. Albers, of Cincinnati, and Bishop James Hugh Ryan, rector of the Catholic University.

It also is hoped that Bishop William J. Hafey, of Raleigh, N. C., will be able to attend.

Twenty bands will march in the parade and one of the features of the procession will be the appearance in line of scholastics from Woodstock College. This will mark the first time they have ever marched in a parade.

Archbishop Curley will wear, during the ceremonies, a cross which once was owned by Bishop John Carroll, of Baltimore, the first Bishop of the Catholic Church in the United States.

Army Men's Fight Is Due for Airing

Former Officer Is Suing Superior for Slander.

Richmond, May 28 (AP).—A legal fight over promotion between a former Reserve Corps officer and his chief of staff is due for an airing in United States District Court here when the $25,000 slander suit of former Lieut. Col. J. H. Beazley against Col. William H. Shepherd, acting chief of staff, comes to trial. Both were attached to the Eightieth Division, Third Corps, United States Army, at the time the trouble started.

Beazley bases his action on a letter he says Col. Shepherd wrote to Gen. Paul S. Malone, of Baltimore, commanding the Third Corps Area, which he says prevented him from being promoted and later forced him from the Reserve Corps.

Col. Shepherd denies that he was actuated by malice in his letter or in his testimony before the examining board.

Bells Will Chime For Tercentenary

Catholic Churches to Mark Mass in Maryland.

Leonardtown, Md., May 28 (Spl.).—Bells in Catholic churches throughout St. Marys County will chime for half an hour Wednesday morning in honor of the Catholic tercentenary celebration to be held during the day in Baltimore Stadium, with Archbishop Michael J. Curley presiding at solemn pontifical military field mass.

John J. Coontz, Washington magazine writer, who is assisting his wife, Kathleen Read Coontz, author of the Maryland tercentenary pageant "St. Maries, the Mother of Maryland," in directing the 500 members of the cast, has installed a portable broadcasting mechanism.

Walt Mason, Himself

Dillinger.

We simply have to hand it to Dillinger, the ghost, that most elusive bandit, whom all good people roast. They had him safe in prison, in fetters neatly draped; a wooden gun was his'n, and with it he escaped. For weeks then he was racing, with followers a few, with stern officials chasing, and telling what they'd do. They set their traps to net him, their ambush good and strong, but didn't seem to fret him, he galloped right along. Along his spoor a-rooting, they penned him up in shacks, and he came out a shooting, and shot them in their tracks. He didn't seem to care if he busted all the rules; he laughed to scorn the sheriff and village constabules. And there were countless legions upon the bandit's track; they combed the forest regions, and then came combing back. "We'll have the skate directly," said these determined men; and then they, circumspectly, went forth to hunt again. Our Uncle's secret agents, who're seldom known to fail, went forth in solemn pageants to put this dub in jail. And there were guardsmen seeking, with rifles and with swords, and Dillinger went streaking right through the valiant hordes. This bandit, blithe and skittish, so debonair and gay, if in dominions British would last about a day.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Brothers All By Harry J. Tuthill

FINE STUFF! WHILE WE WERE OUT SOLVING CRIMES....ONE, ANYHOW, SOME BURGLAR HAS BEEN USING THE SAFE IN OUR OFFICE TO PARK THE SILVERWARE HE GRABBED.
OUR ONE HOPE IS THAT MAJOR AMBUSH WAS ONLY KIDDING WHEN HE SAID HE'D NOTIFY....OH OH! HERE HE COMES NOW WITH THE LAW.
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
OH WHAT A BITTER PILL THIS IS.....TO HAVE THE POLICE, WHO THINK THAT DEDUCTION IS MERELY SOMETHING CONNECTED WITH ELECTRICITY, A POKING THEIR SNOUTS INTO THIS AFFAIR.
ANYHOW WE KNOW WHO THE SILVERWARE BELONGS TO. THE EL DORADOS.
BY JOVE GEORGE, THERE'S AN IDEA! WHY NOT MAKE THIS MESS CASE NO. 2? THE STRANGE CASE OF THE MISSING SILVERWARE.
MISSING? YOU MEAN DISCOVERED. LISTEN, WE'D BETTER NOT TRY ANY TRICK STUFF WITH THE POLICE OR.... HERE THEY ARE WITH THAT PHONY MAJOR.
THERE'S YOUR MEN, OFFICERS. WATCH THEM, THEY'RE NOT AS SILLY AS THEY LOOK!
WHAT'S ALL THIS ABOUT SILVER...?
YES, WE FOUND IT.... AFTER A LOT OF HARD WORK. IT BELONGS TO MONTGOMERY EL DORADO AND AS A MATTER OF PROFESSIONAL COURTESY WE'LL LET YOU HELP US RETURN IT TO HIM, OFFICERS.

PETE COULDN'T UNDERSTAND WHY JOE WOULD NOT ACCEPT ANY OFFERS FOR DYNAMITE TO FIGHT
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.: © 1934 by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.
WHAT'S WRONG WITH THEM OFFERS? NOT ENOUGH JACK?
NO—THEY OFFER PLENTY—A COUPLE OF 'EM GUARANTEE AS MUCH AS FIFTY GRAND!
AN' YOU'RE TURNIN' 'EM DOWN!
SURE—BECAUSE NONE OF 'EM'S FROM THE GUY I WANT—THAT FOREIGN CHAMP-BATTLING BLITZEN!
-I TRIED TO GET HIM ONCE BEFORE-AN' THE ANSWER I GOT WAS THAT MAYBE HE COULD USE DYNAMITE SOMETIME AS A SPARRIN' PARTNER!
AN' BECAUSE THAT CRACK MADE YOU SORE YOU'RE PASSIN' UP ALL THESE SWELL BIDS?
YOU GOT IT! YOU THINK I'M GONNA LET A GUY INSULT ME AN' GET AWAY WITH IT?

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY By Clifford McBride

FROM NOW ON YOU'RE WORKING FOR YOUR PASSAGE AN' FOOD ABOARD THIS SHIP, I'M GOING TO UNLOCK THAT DOOR AN' LET YOU OUT, ONE WORD FROM ME AN' MY MATE HERE'LL SEE YOU OBEY ORDERS.

COME ON, GET THAT BUCKET AN' MOP AN' START SWABBIN' DOWN THE DECKS.
KEEP YOUR EYE ON HIM, NAPOLEON, I'VE TOLD THAT CREW OF YOURS TO ANSWER ME, "AYE-AYE, SIR", AN' I MEAN IT.

DIXIE DUGAN The Same Girl By J. P. McEvoy and J. H. Striebel

MYRA LORING?—OH—I ALMOST FORGOT—THAT WAS MY FATHER'S NAME.
—AND SO IT'S YOURS, TOO—"MACKEY"—THAT WAS THE NAME OF THE OLD FISHERMAN WHO FOUND YOU—THEY JUST TAGGED HIS NAME ON TO YOU AT THE ORPHANAGE FOR WANT OF ANOTHER
SEE—YOUR BIRTH CERTIFICATE WHICH I GOT WHEN I WAS SETTLING YOUR INHERITANCE CASE—IT READS "MYRA LORING" SO IF YOU WANT YOUR REAL NAME—
I DO! I DO!!
THEN IT'S A SIMPLE LEGAL FORMALITY—AS GOOD AS DONE—YOU CAN START IN CALLING YOURSELF MYRA LORING RIGHT THIS MINUTE!
"MYRA LORING"—AND I'M NO LONGER MYRA MACKEY

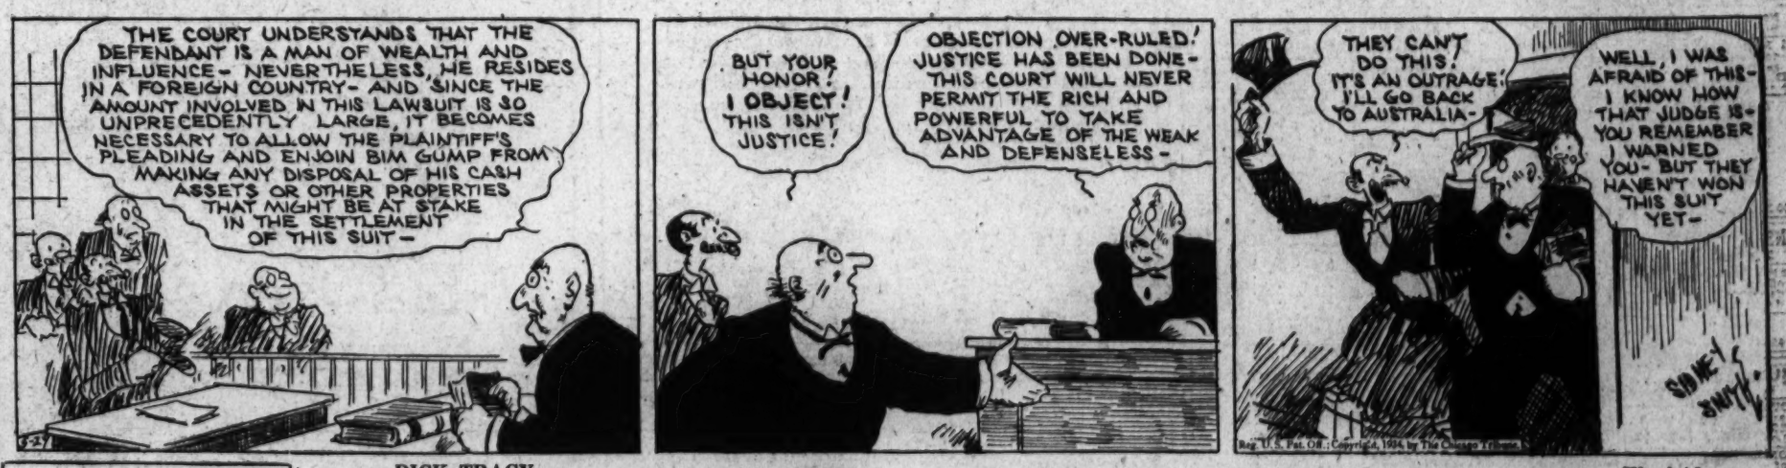
THE GUMPS Round One



THE COURT UNDERSTANDS THAT THE DEFENDANT IS A MAN OF WEALTH AND INFLUENCE—NEVERTHELESS, HE RESIDES IN A FOREIGN COUNTRY—AND SINCE THE AMOUNT INVOLVED IN THIS LAWSUIT IS SO UNPRECEDENTLY LARGE, IT BECOMES NECESSARY TO ALLOW THE PLAINTIFF'S PLEADING AND ENJOIN BIM GUMP FROM MAKING ANY DISPOSAL OF HIS CASH ASSETS OR OTHER PROPERTIES THAT MIGHT BE AT STAKE IN THE SETTLEMENT OF THIS SUIT—
BUT YOUR HONOR! I OBJECT! THIS ISN'T JUSTICE!
OBJECTION OVER-RULED! JUSTICE HAS BEEN DONE—THIS COURT WILL NEVER PERMIT THE RICH AND POWERFUL TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THE WEAK AND DEFENSELESS—
THEY CAN'T DO THIS! IT'S AN OUTRAGE! I'LL GO BACK TO AUSTRALIA—
WELL, I WAS AFRAID OF THIS—I KNOW HOW THAT JUDGE IS—YOU REMEMBER I WARNED YOU—BUT THEY HAVEN'T WON THIS SUIT YET—

-:- Radio Waves and Ripples -:-

MRS. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, bringing a message to farm and homemakers, will inaugurate a new program arrangement of the Department of Agriculture-sponsored Farm and Home Hour, to be heard on the first Wednesday in each month, starting June 6.

Familiar to listeners on its regular 12.30 p. m. N. B. C. spot, the new feature, to be known as the "Home Demonstration Radio Hour," will air discussions of accomplishments and developments in home demonstration work. Other speakers on the inaugural program will be C. W. Warburton, director of extension work for the Department; Mrs. P. L Timberlake, of Powhatan County, Va., who will discuss "What Ten Years of Home Demonstration Work Has Meant to Our Family."

Later programs will give farm officials an opportunity to enlighten the public on improvements that families can make in safeguarding health, home and community. There will be discussions of maintenance of standards on small incomes, recreation for farmers and the satisfaction of farm life. Music will be furnished by the Homesteaders' Orchestra

WITH its eye on the ping pong monopoly — or draw your bayonets, boys, here comes a sports announcer—WJSV yesterday shifted its attack to another sector in that minor combat for sporting broadcasts you've heard about.

Not content, apparently, with its exclusive rights to reporting wrestling functions, WJSV announces with some aplomb that Bob Trout will give his matter-of-fact impressions of the Johnny Risko-Natie Brown heavyweight bout scheduled for June 4 at 10:30 p. m. at the Stadium.

But those N. B. C. minds are not yawning. Oh! No! They have been meeting in serious conclave for tactical confabs. And among other things, they discuss "policy."

CERTAIN favorite stars or programs make willing slaves of us all. Even your scribe intends to stay in tonight . . . wild women or wilder horses could not keep him from dialing WRC at 9 p. m. They're going to do "Carmen" and it'll be the bull-ring, that cigarette factory in Seville, smugglers' caves and an inn thronged with gypsies and soldiers, or nothing.

Adapted for one hour radio presentation, the Beauty Box Theater offers Gladys Swarthout and James Melton in the featured roles. Miss Swarthout is good to look upon and her impression of the fiery Spanish lass, interpreted by scores of others, should be very satisfying.

James Milton shouldn't be troubled with Don Jose's role . . . the gullible soldier, one of opera's most popular roles, should lend its light arias and swelling notes to Melton's attractive voice.

N. B. C.'s local studios just never have had a production manager . . . other boys who happened to be handy did the work . . . so after June 1 one David Shannon Allen, of Washington, will join the staff and take on duties that such a job might entail. He's had radio experience with a dramatic company.

Whitecaps.

WRC—Round table broadcast of eight newspaper art critics judging the $75,000,000 World's Fair Art Exhibit, 3 p. m.; one hour presentation of Bizet's "Carmen" with James Melton and Gladys Swarthout, 9 p. m.; Senator Alva B. Adams, of Colorado, discussing the Glass bill, which sets up a new system of credit for industry, 10:30 p. m.

WMAL—Discussion of "National Administration and Local Reorganization" by George F. Milton, editor of the Chattanooga News, and Arnold B. Hall, of the Brookings Institution, 6:15 p. m.; Initial installment of "Off the Deep End," Crime Club thriller, 7 p. m.; Cliff Edwards, the celebrated "Ukulele Ike," as guest of Ray Perkins, Palmer House, 9 p. m.; S. Mack Eastman, chief of the Extra-European section of the International Labor office in Geneva, heard from Swtizerland in discussion of "The Coming International Labor Conference," 9:30 p. m.

WJSV—Tenth annual spelling bee for elementary school children, 11:30 a. m.; The Washington Post presents Ruth Anne Davis in comments of feminine interest, 12 noon; Henry J. Fisher, president of the United Hospital fund, discussing "What Is Happening to Hospitals?" in an interview with Louis Resnick, director of the Department of Public Information, Welfare Council of New York, 2:45 p. m.; Col. Stoopnagle and Budd interviewing Col. Slippit, who orginated habit of sticking tickets in hatbands on trains, Camel Carvan, 9 p. m.

When Columbia broadcasts the finals of the tenth annual National spelling bee for elementary school children today from 11:15 p. m. to 12:00 noon, three eminent Washington educators will be holding the switch.

Dean George B. Woods, of American University, is chairman of the bee; Dean C. E. Hill, of George Washington University, and Dr. H. E. Warner, of the District Public Schools, will serve as pronouncers. Sponsored by 23 daily newspapers, the contest offers $1,800 in prizes to competitors. They'll juggle the words at the new National Museum here.

Hunter Dance Pupils Will Present Program

A program of dances by Alice Louise Hunter and her pupils, assisted by members of Miss Hunter's Community Center class at Raymond School, will be given next Friday evening in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets. Miss Hunter will present two solos, a tango by Canzino and Chopin's Valse in E minor.

Among the ensemble numbers will be "The Artist's Dream," to music by Johann Strauss; "The Elements" (Schumann), "Interference" (Chasins), "Fairies in Our Garden" (Hadley) and "The North Wind Doth Blow" (Schumann). The pianists will be Mrs. Edith H. Hunter and Florence McCann.

Association Heads to Meet.

The annual meeting of the Washington Trade Association Executives will be held at the Carlton Hotel, Thursday at 1 p. m., with Dr. John Dickinson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, as the guest speaker.

Army Reprimand Refused by Officer

Innocent of Misconduct, He Says; to Face Trial.

San Antonio, Tex., May 28 (AP).—Capt. Harold R. Coulter, Fort Sam Houston polo star, said today he had declined to accept an official reprimand and would defend himself before a court-martial against charges of improper conduct that also involve a wealthy San Antonio divorcee.

Capt. Coulter said he was given the option of taking a reprimand or standing trial. He declared he was innocent of any misconduct.

The case is expected to be tried in July. The charges against Capt. Coulter are drawn under the ninety-fifth and ninety-sixth articles of war and allege conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman. Conviction under the ninety-fifth article carries mandatory dismissal from the Army. Capt. Coulter is commanding officer of Company M, Twenty-third Infantry.

Pianist Plays in Charleston.

Louis Potter will give a piano recital this evening for the Friday Music Club of Charleston, W. Va., in the Women's Club auditorium there.

"I am a Nurse"

What do
DR. M. W. LOCKE
shoes mean to me?

Most nurses have foot problems . . . it's only natural when you consider how many hours a day they spend walking up and down hard stone hospital corridors. Wearing an ordinary shoe would soon cause trouble. But not so with Dr. Locke's famous shoes. A "cookie" holds up the foot arch and a "wedge" swings the foot to the outside. There you are, Nurse, with never a footache to try your patience or your patients!
